Firm linked to Stavros hired for village work

by LYNN ASINOF

Country Service and Supply Co., a firm linked to convicted political boss James Stavros, has been hired to excavate the new parking lot at the Wheeling Village Hall.

Village Mgr. George Passolt said the Northbrook Company "was the only one we could get." He estimated the work would cost $1,000 and said he saw nothing wrong in hiring the firm.

Stavros, serving a four-year federal prison term, was a behind-the-scenes influence in village government until he was indicted Jan. 31 and subsequently pleaded guilty to extortion and income tax violations.

Stavros has admitted working for Country Service. The firm's president also has pleaded guilty to taking part in the $40,000 shakedown of a Wheeling developer by Stavros.

Passolt said the excavation work was originally to be done by village employees. He said, however, the only earth moving machine that could be rented was too small, and said the project was delayed by recent rains.

"We figured we better get someone who does the work professionally," Passolt said, noting that the village is trying to finish the job before winter weather sets in. The parking lot is needed to accommodate traffic generated by a local branch of the Circuit Court.

The manager said that several firms were contacted by Larry Oppenheimer, village engineer and director of public works. He said Oppenheimer hired the firm because the other firms were unavailable.

The Country Service firm has surfaced several times in the village's extortion scandal, which resulted from a federal probe of shakedowns by Stavros and Wheeling officials.

Stavros used Country Service to launder $40,000 in payoff money, the federal government charged.

James Stavros

The money was extorted from Tekton Corp. in 1970 in return for zoning for its Cedar Run development.

WILLIS CLARK, president of Country Service, accepted a $40,000 check from Tekton and then wrote a company check to Stavros. Clark was fined $3,000 after pleading guilty to filing a false corporate income tax return by overstating the firm's income and expenses by $40,000.

Stavros last year acknowledged he was employed by Country Service.

The admission was made in testimony given in connection with an auto accident damage suit filed by Stavros and William Bleber, former Wheeling building director also convicted as a result of the federal probe.

Wheeling zoning board member Alan Martin is also employed by Country Service, which was awarded contracts by numerous developers whose projects were approved by the zoning board.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said he would have preferred another firm for the work, noting Country Service's association with the Stavros scandal. "It would have made a lot of people happier," he said.

Scanlon, however, said that if other firms were unavailable for the job "you have to take what you can get." He said his primary concern is completion of the parking lot so that the Circuit Court can open a branch in village hall.

OTHER BOARD members contacted on the matter said they were not concerned about the hiring of Country Service. Trustee Edward Berger said he had no objections "as long as they do a good job." Trustee John Koeppen said he did not mind as long as prices were checked with other firms.

Passolt said the village previously used Country Service for a minor excavating job.

COUNTRY SERVICE and Supply Co. trucks hauled hall that will become a parking lot. The firm, and the Wheeling extortion scandal, was hired to away topsoil Saturday from land next to village linked to convicted political boss James Stavros do the excavation by Village Mgr. George Passolt.

Should open to 4 lanes in 2 weeks

3 Dundee Rd. phases nearly done

Three additional phases of the Dundee Road improvement project should be near completion within two weeks, said Edward Gillon, an engineer for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Gillon said the Dundee Road extension west of Arlington Heights Road should be open to four lanes of traffic next week.

The $3 million Dundee Road project involves widening the road to four lanes between Ill. Rte. 53 in Arlington Heights, through Buffalo Grove, to Ill. Rte. 83 in Wheeling.

Gillon also said work on the relocated Arlington Heights Road is nearing completion and that roadway is slated for opening soon. Crews have finished resurfacing operations and are working on the medians. Grading and gutter work still remain to be done, Gillon said.

ALSO COMING to a close is refinishing work on Buffalo Grove Road south of Dundee. The entranceway to Buffalo Grove Road in front of the Ranch Mart

Shopping Center has been closed while improvements were being made and for median installation about 600 feet north of the intersection.

Some sewer and road shoulder work still must be done and Gillon said the entranceway will stay closed until its completion. "We hate to work under traffic," he said.

Unseasonably warm weather has not only speeded up the work but Gillon said asphalt laid on warm days will set smoother, drain faster and eliminate maintenance problems that might have occurred if the weather had been colder.

All four lanes of Dundee Road between Buffalo Grove and Ill. Rte. 83 were opened recently after improvements on the section running through the village were completed.

GILLON ALSO said state officials have not yet handed down a decision on whether an estimated $10,000 to $11,000 saved on the Dundee Road median compromise can be used for landscaping the dividers.

Last September, village officials and community business leaders agreed on a plan calling for alternating sections of mountable and landscaped medians for the two-mile stretch of the Buffalo Grove roadway.

The savings comes from the use of top soil rather than asphalt on the landscaped sections.

State officials still were undecided on what types and size of trees could be planted, Gillon said.

Rezone sign law on agenda tonight

The Wheeling Village Board tonight is expected to pass an ordinance requiring that signs be posted on property being considered for rezoning.

The ordinance was suggested by the plan commission and the zoning board after residents complained they were unaware that zoning changes had been requested in their neighborhoods.

State law requires the village to publish notices in a local newspaper of public hearings on zoning changes, but there are no other provisions for notifying residents.

In other business tonight the board is expected to:

- Require cigaret machines to have electronic devices so businesses can more easily prevent the sale of cigarets to minors.
- Abolish the tree commission.
- Consider granting a zoning extension for property on the north side of Palatine Road, west of Wheeling Road.
- Approve payment of about $23,000 for the 1975 street maintenance program.

If construction of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove branch of Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital does not begin this month, the cost could increase by $2 million, a hospital spokesman said.

Norman Davis, a Franklin Boulevard consultant, made the observation in view of renewed speculation over whether the hospital is needed.

Comprehensive Health Planning, a local hospital planning agency that must approve hospital plans, reviewed the Franklin Boulevard plans last week. "I think we made a good presentation, but I'm not sure we convinced them a hospital is needed in the area," said Davis.

Approval by the agency is a prerequisite to receiving Blue Cross-Blue Shield coverage.

"Comprehensive Health Planning is operating under the assumption a hospital is not needed," said Davis. "If you take it from that standpoint, I'm not optimistic."

Davis said the contract for the facility, on the east side of Schoenbeck Road just south of the Wheeling village limits, calls for groundbreaking by Dec. 1. If it is not started the agreement will have to be renegotiated.

"THE CONTRACTOR has informed us that if construction isn't started by then the cost will go up one to one and three-quarters per cent a month," Davis said. "The project will take about 18 months, so that would mean a possible increase of $2 million."

As proposed, the 225-bed facility was expected to cost about $11.3 million, but the delay could push the price over $13 million, Davis said.

Patrick DeMoon, executive director of Franklin Boulevard, recently said he was optimistic Comprehensive Health Planning would approve the plans.

Approval by the agency is uncertain because of a recent report that said there is no need for additional hospitals in Cook County. Robert Devitt of the agency said plans for the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove facility will not be approved unless Franklin Boulevard proves that a need for the hospital exists.

BOTH DeMOON AND Davis said, however, plans for building the hospital will proceed with or without the approval of the agency.

Without approval from Comprehensive Health Planning and a Blue Cross-Blue Shield contract, Franklin Boulevard probably will have difficulty obtaining financing.

A state law allows the hospital to finance part of the construction with general obligation bonds purchased through the county or municipality in order to obtain lower interest rates. Unless the hospital can show financing agencies it has a Blue Cross contract, however, the agencies are reluctant to commit financial support.

Elk Grove girl, 10, shot to death

A 10-year-old Elk Grove Village girl was shot to death in her home Sunday afternoon and a 13-year-old boy was taken into custody in the shooting. Elk Grove Village police, who refused to identify the girl or the boy, said the two were alone in the home at the time of the shooting. The girl was pronounced dead at the scene by her family doctor and her body was taken to county morgue. Police said the boy was taken to the Audy Home Sunday night and information in the shooting would be presented today to the state's attorney's office. Police refused to provide any further information.

Parents seek bus safety

Parents in Des Plaines are organizing a campaign to demand yellow school bus transportation for youngsters in Des Plaines Dist. 62 schools. Children currently ride United Motor Coach Co. buses, which are not subject to stricter yellow school bus regulations. A 12-year-old boy suffered bruises and scrapes on his legs Friday when the bus pulled away while he was getting off through a rear door. The driver, William J. Radsevic, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident. One of the women organizing the yellow-bus campaign said: "Our children are important. Why can't we have safe buses?"

Elk Grove principal dies

Robert Haskell, 56, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington. He had been principal since 1967 and had previously held administrative posts at Forest View and Prospect high schools. A memorial service will be held at Elk Grove High School at 10 a.m. Wednesday and school classes will be suspended that day.

Free textbooks approved

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 voters Saturday overwhelmingly approved a referendum calling for elimination of textbook fees. The 1,418 to 153 vote means the district will pick up the cost of books instead of renting them to parents at a charge of $3.50 a year for kindergartners and $7.50 a year for first through eighth grades.

Kiwanians may be dropped

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of the Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark. Rather than revoke the local club's charter, said Maurice Myerson, Kiwanis lieutenant governor for this area, the Kiwanis International is more likely to drop members who stand behind Miss Clark. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law," Myerson said, referring to the Kiwanis no-women rule. "There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law."

Helton to take stand today

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the 1969 slaying of an Arlington Heights service station manager during a robbery. Videotapes of three varying 1969 accounts by Helton of the robbery and murder were played in court Friday. Two Arlington Heights policemen called as defense witnesses also testified that Helton visited their homes while he was in police custody and that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood.

Young and Mikva withdraw unfair campaign charges

by STEVE BROWN

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, and his Democratic opponent, Abner J. Mikva, withdrew unfair campaign practices charges against each other Sunday after a three-man arbitration panel heard arguments for more than 28 hours. In a joint statement, the candidates said the dispute could not be resolved and continuation of the hearing would serve no useful purpose.

Charges were filed last month with the Fair Campaign Practices Committee generally alleging each misrepresented his opponent's views in his campaign literature.

Young filed his complaint first, on Oct. 22. Mikva responded and also entered a countercomplaint, charging misrepresentation by Young.

The final action of Sunday's arbitration session apparently surprised supporters of both candidates. The session, which was conducted in Chicago by the Midwest chapter of the American Arbitration Assn., began at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Both candidates and their aides attended portions of the session, which ran through the night. The hearing was closed to the press.

Samuel H. Young

Abner J. Mikva

In their statement, the candidates said, "It now appears that the hearing cannot be completed before Tuesday's election and continuation of the hearing can serve no useful purpose."

The statement also noted that findings of the hearing could probably not be conveyed to the voters before the election. The three-man arbitration panel consisted of Samuel C. Thompson, Granger Cook and Richard A. Giangiorli.

Young's supporters indicated they felt the hearing was worthwhile even though their candidate missed several campaign appearances and the matter was not resolved.

They labeled the session the "first political arbitration of its kind in the nation."

Besides the misrepresentation charges, Young also said he believed Mikva's allegations charging him with a conflict of interest in regard to several congressional votes were not violations of any House rules.

Mikva had charged that Young misstated Mikva's views on several issues, including busing and gun control, to the voters of the 10th District.

Stable hand death 'undetermined'

A coroner's jury ruled Friday that circumstances surrounding the death of a man beaten at Arlington Park during the summer were undetermined after witnesses failed to appear for testimony.

Evidence in the death of John H. Walker, 51, of Covina, Calif., will be presented to a Cook County grand jury Thursday.

Murder charges have been filed against Stanley Woods, a former employee at the race track. Woods still is at large.

Walker died in a Berwyn hospital after he suffered blows to the head during a fight July 31 at Arlington Park, where he and Woods were employed as stable hands.

Woods and John Cochran reportedly told police they found Walker unconscious in the race track parking lot and put him in his car thinking him to be intoxicated. They reportedly said when they returned to the car in the afternoon, Walker was still unconscious and that they decided to drive him to Hawthorne Park in Cicero, where his wife worked.

Woods was taken to MacNeal Memorial Hospital, where he died Aug. 15.

Woods and Cochran have been charged with auto theft for allegedly stealing Walker's car.

Democrats predict big gains...GOP see no disaster

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic National Chairman Robert S. Strauss Sunday predicted large party gains in Tuesday's national elections but his Republican counterpart, Mary Louise Smith, said the GOP will do "much better" than expected.

In their final assessment before the first post-Watergate elections, Strauss volunteered specific predictions in Congressional and gubernatorial contests but Smith refused to "play the numbers game."

Strauss said the Democrats would gain five Senate seats to bolster their current 56-42 margin but added that the pickup might be as low as four or as high as six. He also predicted the Democrats would increase their hold on the House with a gain of between 27 and 32 new seats. The current lineup is 248 Democrats and 187 Republicans.

Following the election, "85 to 90 per cent of the people in the nation will be living under Democratic governors," Strauss added, signifying his feeling that Democrats will keep or win the state houses in the most populous states.

Mrs. Smith refused to be pulled into specific speculation about the outcome of Tuesday's elections, but said, "I think we are going to do much better than predicted" and added "I see a turning around." She predicted this trend would continue until the polls close.

"I am convinced this is not going to be a disaster because in the long run it is not a referendum on Watergate," Mrs. Smith said.

Strauss agreed, saying that "Watergate really isn't an issue" but added that one of the failouts of the Nixon Administration scandals is that many good Republicans refused to seek office.

"There is no valid reason to take it out on the party," Mrs. Smith said. "The people running now had nothing to do with Watergate."

An even more optimistic assessment of Democratic prospects came from Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, who said Democrats would gain between five and seven Republican Senate seats without losing any of their own and finish the elections with a net gain of 35-40 seats in the House.

Carter also said the Democrats may pick up as many as 10 governorships but added that a more realistic figure would be seven.

Republican Senatorial Campaign

Chairman Bill Brock of Tennessee and House GOP Campaign Chairman Robert

H. Michel of Illinois conceded Congressional losses but said they hoped to keep them under the normal off-election year turnovers.

Both said that President Ford's heavy campaigning has been a "plus" but added that Ford's pardon of former President Nixon and the proposed 5 per cent surtax hurt.

Michel conceded "we're going to suffer some losses" and said he hoped the setbacks could be kept within a range of 20 to 25 seats in the House.

Brock was optimistic for GOP chances to defeat Sen. Birch Bayh in Indiana and Sen. George S. McGovern in South Dakota as well as for picking up seats being vacated by retiring Democrats in Nevada, Iowa and North Carolina.

Charles Goodell, who served in the House and Senate from New York before losing his Senate seat in 1970 to Conservative James L. Buckley, predicted Sunday that as many as 60 GOP House seats may be lost Tuesday because the Republicans failed to field their best candidates.

Goodell, chairman of the amnesty programs clemency board, said he has warned his old friend, President Ford, that Tuesday's elections will be "very bad" for Republicans.

But, he said, the party probably will regain most losses in 1976 — as it did in 1966 and 1968 after suffering severe losses in 1964.

Specifically, he said, "We're probably going to lose between 40 and 60 seats in the House" and in the Senate "five or six" GOP seats will be picked up by Democrats.

U.N. ponders going off U.S. dollar

The American dollar, the major international currency, no longer is regarded by some Communist and Third World countries as good enough to pay the bills of the United Nations. Some members of a 13-nation study group which studied U.N. finances suggested that instead of using the U.S. dollar, the organization should adopt a monetary unit linked to gold as used by the European Economic Community.

Report 3 killed in S. Viet village

Strauss: GOP division hurting Rocky Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss Sunday said that Nelson Rockefeller's nomination as Vice President is suffering from a deepening division in the Republican party. Strauss said the nomination is "under attack from the Reagan-Buckley wing of the party. Asked if Ford should withdraw the nomination, Strauss replied that was getting into "an iffy position," and added we ought to wait for all the evidence.

Halloween candy killer hunted

City detectives in Pasadena, Tex., many of them working on their day off, walked around a horseshoe shaped residential street Sunday, knocking on every door and trying to find the person who laced Halloween candy with cyanide that killed an 8-year-old boy. Detective Larry Turnipseed said police are positive the candy that killed Timothy Mark O'Bryen came from a house located on one of two streets. The streets loop around to form a horseshoe.

Socialist Workers Party in court again

UMW strike appears likely

Negotiators trying to avert a nationwide coal strike broke off their talks Sunday night and a coal industry spokesman said no time had been set to resume. Snowstorm cripples northwest Kansas

The season's first big snow lashed the northwest corner of Kansas Sunday, snarling traffic and knocking out power in some areas. Police in St. Francis near the state's northwest tip reported eight inches of snow at midday and still falling. One-third of the town's 1,600 residents were without electricity, police said, because a major section power line was knocked down and numerous lines into homes cut off.

Police in Detroit are looking for thieves who made off with a very hot haul — 120 blue movies. At least 19 persons attending a birthday party at the Beverly Hilton Hotel Saturday night and early Sunday were systematically tied up and robbed as they entered the hotel suite. The robbers apparently did not use unnecessary force, and none of the victims were injured.

Kissinger slates talks in Mideast

BUCHAREST, Romania (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said Sunday he will spend three days in the Middle East conferring with Arab and Israeli leaders about moving ahead with peace talks.

Kissinger flew from Iran to Romania Sunday for talks with President Nicolae Ceausescu. He said the purpose of his Mideast mission was "to consult all parties in the Middle East on the significance of the Rabat Arab summit and possible next steps towards a Middle East peace." Kissinger said the meetings would take place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Kissinger's Mideast trip is his second in less than a month. It is understood that his primary purpose in returning so soon is to find out how the Arabs' decision to recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole spokesman for Palestinian people will affect progress toward peace. He is reported to believe that the PLO recognition has complicated the chances of getting negotiations started.

From Bucharest Kissinger will fly to Belgrade to confer with Yugoslav President Marshal Tito. On Tuesday he will make a speech to the opening session in the World Food Conference in Rome, meeting with Pope Paul VI in the Vatican, confer with leaders of the crisis-ridden Italian government, and then leave for Cairo to see Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Meet to decide fate of Cuba begins Friday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will be conspicuous by his planned absence, the United States and 20 of its neighbors meet Friday to decide the fate of the now-controversial economic and political sanctions applied against Cuba a decade ago.

When the meeting adjourns Nov. 12, the Cuban embargo probably will be a thing of the past — ending what many Latin Americans consider the final traces of the Cold War in the Western Hemisphere. The vote, however, may be close.

The five-day meeting of the foreign ministers of the Organization of American States will take place in Quito, Ecuador. Kissinger is on another of his round-the-world diplomatic trips, and Deputy Secretary of State Robert Ingersoll will be the senior American official at the Quito conference.

Although the U.S. remained officially uncommitted as of this weekend, Latin American diplomats in Washington felt certain the Ford Administration would not oppose halting the ineffective embargo since the U.S. already has begun reviewing its own policy toward Cuba.

Study contends FTC not up to protector role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission, despite continuing criticism, lacks strong leadership and is not living up to its role as a consumer protector, a congressional study said Sunday.

Part of the problem, it said, is that the appropriations committees of Congress may have worsened the situation with inconsistent directives "which may be at variance with the basic responsibilities of the commission."

"I am disappointed with the study's finding that there has been little progress when the American public needs the greatest protection against unfair and deceptive practices," said Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the House commerce subcommittee which produced the study report.

Moss said the criticisms leveled against the FTC in 1969 by a Ralph Nader team and a task force from the American Bar Assn. in large part still remain valid. He added the study shows there is a need for a closer look by Congress at the agency as well as a demand for legislation to improve the FTC's powers and performance.

President Ford returned to the White House early Sunday from a three-day western campaign swing and, with a big grin, waved off requests to predict Tuesday's elections. After attending Holy Communion services at St. John's Episcopal Church on Lafayette Square across from the White House, the President reserved the afternoon for watching the Washington Redskins-Green Bay Packers televised football game and a tennis match later with Jim Brown, a Utah cattleman who is one of Ford's frequent skiing companions. Ford scheduled a farrow conference today with former Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky who is preparing to take up his post as the first U.S. ambassador to East Germany.

Meanwhile in Long Beach, Calif., Richard M. Nixon was taken off the critical list Sunday and is well enough to sit up on the edge of his hospital bed and begin eating soft foods. In his daily medical report on the 61-year-old former president, Dr. John C. Luagren said his medical report was "the most encouraging" since Nixon re-entered Long Beach Memorial Hospital Oct. 23 for tests on his phlebotic left leg.

A White House aide announced Sunday that Gerald R. Warren, Nixon's chief spokesman during his last year in the presidency, will be retained by President Ford as deputy press secretary with responsibility for maintaining liaison with the nation's newspaper editors and other press contacts outside Washington. Warren assumes some of the duties once performed for Nixon by Herbert B. Klein and Ken W. Clawson, both of whom had the title of director of White House communications.

In a book to be published today, the widow of Apollo 1 astronaut Virgil "Gus" Grissom says she decided to sue the builder of the spacecraft in which he died in 1967 after the remaining astronauts agreed to eliminate widows from a fringe benefit deal. "I realized right then that the astronauts didn't give a damn about the widows," says Mrs. Betty Grissom, adding that she had considered filing a damage suit ever since her husband died with two others in the 1967 spacecraft fire. But she said she continued to live by the "code of togetherness" — "accept your loss in silence, bear up, speak no evil, don't rock the boat, be noble and sacrifice your life to the good of government and military" — until 1971, when she finally did file suit later settled out of court for $350,000.

Cousins John A. and Marvin Douglas were found guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of country music star David "Stringbean" Akeman, 57, and his wife, Estelle, 59. Criminal Court Judge Allen Cornelius in Nashville, Tenn., this weekend sentenced the pair to 99-year terms to run consecutively. The Akemans were shot to death at their cabin in rural Davidson County last Nov. 10 when they apparently surprised burglars as they returned home from a performance at the Grand Ole Opry.

A MONTREAL FIREMAN probes rubble of tenement block in east Montreal that was destroyed by fire. Striking firemen and city officials reached tentative pact agreement early Sunday, ending a 2-day strike by 2,400 city firemen. Several blocks were reduced to rubble by fires, and scores of persons left homeless by the strike that began Thursday night.

Indicators tell troubled economic state

A welter of indicators show the troubled state of the U.S. economy, beset by both inflation and recession.

Although these statistics are issued separately, they must be viewed together to paint the full picture.

• Prices: The Consumer Price Index increased in September by 1.2 per cent. If sustained, this would translate into an annual increase in consumer prices of 14.4 per cent. In the first nine months of this year, prices rose more than they did in all of last year.

• Inflation: Measured by a broader gauge — called the GNP "deflator," a measurement preferred by economists — inflation's pace was at an annual rate of 11.5 per cent during the July-September period of 1974.

• Wholesale prices: A partial harbinger of things to come, wholesale prices rose by one-tenth of 1 per cent in September, the smallest increase in 11 months and equivalent to a 1.2 per cent annual rate. This was well below the 3.7 per cent annual rate recorded in August.

• Unemployment: Joblessness rose to 6 per cent in October, the highest in three years. The number of unemployed persons looking for work reached 5.5 million out of a civilian work force of 92 million. In October of 1973, unemployment measured 4.6 per cent.

• Output: The nation's "real" Gross National Product, a measure of output of goods and services adjusted to eliminate the distortions of inflation, declined in the third quarter of 1974 at an annual rate of 2.9 per cent. This was the third consecutive drop. One common definition of recession is a decline for two consecutive quarters in GNP.

• Industrial output: Production of U.S. industries fell at an annual rate of three-

Ford closing 3 plants, GM sets cutbacks due to sales

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. is closing three car assembly plants for one week starting today and Chrysler Corp. is closing one, idling more than 13,000 workers at a time of deepening concern in the entire industry.

In addition, General Motors Corp. said it will cut back production at four of its plants for one week starting Nov. 11.

Among other workers involved in the Ford cutbacks are employees at a parts facility in Chicago. Ford said it is laying off 1,000 workers indefinitely as part of its austerity program. Most of them work in 10 parts facilities in New York, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan as well as Chicago.

The cutbacks, earliest in a new car year in recent times, follow lagging car sales. Sales so far this year are off nearly 22 per cent and new car introduction is the poorest in 10 years.

Overall, the layoffs, temporary or indefinite, will push the auto industry's unemployed total to 51,000.

tenths of 1 per cent in the third quarter. This compares with a rise of 1.9 per cent in the second quarter and a decline in the first quarter of 6.6 per cent.

• Productivity: Worker productivity — output per hour of work — fell at an annual rate of 3 per cent in the third quarter. This helped boost unit labor costs at an annual rate of 13.9 per cent. Productivity often declines at the start of a recession; there is not enough work to keep employees occupied full time, but the drop in demand is not yet sharp enough to justify layoffs.

• Pay: "Real" hourly pay — adjusted to bring out inflation — fell at an annual rate of 2.3 per cent in the third quarter. Average hourly pay of factory workers rose in September to $4.51 from $4.43 in August. In major labor contracts signed in the third quarter, wage increases averaged 11.3 per cent a year, up from 10 per cent in the previous quarter.

• Retail sales: They fell in September 1.3 per cent below August.

• Profits: A Wall Street Journal tabulation shows a 29 per cent increase in profits during the third quarter over the same period a year ago.

• The future: The Commerce Department's composite index of leading economic indicators — a barometer of where the economy is likely to go — suffered a 2.5 per cent decline in September, its sharpest monthly drop in more than 23 years. (United Press International)

United Fund passes halfway point

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund has passed the halfway mark in its efforts to raise $20,000 for this year's fund-raising campaign for local organizations and charities.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said $11,400 has been raised, and he is optimistic the goal will be reached.

In a four-day period last week, Bauer said, the campaign raised $3,400. This year's United Fund drive was started two weeks ago and contributions will be coming in until Dec. 1.

"We're moving out sharply now," Bauer said. "I am very pleased with the way things have gone so far and hope we can keep up at the rate we're going."

LEADING THIS YEAR'S campaign,

Bauer said, are the teachers and staff from High School Dist. 214 and Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21. The faculty and staff in the two districts have donated or committed about $7,000 to the campaign, he said.

"We have been getting unbelievable contributions from those school districts," Bauer said. "They are way ahead of the goal they were reaching for. Those teachers really realize the needs of the community."

The two biggest single contributions to the campaign, he said, came from McDonald's restaurant, 188 E. Dundee Rd., which donated about $1,400 and Hans Bavarian Lodge, 931 N. Milwaukee Ave., which gave $500.

"Those two donations have really gotten our industrial and business campaign rolling," Bauer said. "We're hoping that others will follow their example."

BAUER SAID THE United Fund this year sent letters to every business, industry and home in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove asking for donations.

So far, he said, business and industry has donated about $1,100 in addition to the two previously mentioned contributions and residents have given about $1,400.

"I'm a little disappointed with the donations from residents," he said. "I'd like to see that pick up a little bit."

Bauer said he is pleased with the response from business and industry, but still would like to see it increased. This year's contributions in that area already have surpassed the amount collected last year, he said.

WITHIN THE NEXT few weeks, Bauer said, United Fund representatives will talk to all businessmen and homeowners who did not respond to the letters. The representatives will show where the donations will be used and why they are needed, he said.

This year's local goal is $8,000 higher than the one set last year. In addition to the local goal, Bauer said $65,000 will be added by the Crusade of Mercy.

Money raised by the United Fund will help support Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Northwest Suburban Homemakers Service, Clearbrook Center for the Retarded, Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Northwest Mental Health Center and the Salvation Army Family Counseling Center.

Kiwanis Club backers of woman face ouster

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark.

The continuing controversy could be decided Saturday at the next meeting of the club, which has been threatened with loss of its charter by Kiwanis International.

The Kiwanis official, Maurice Myerson, lieutenant governor for the area district, believed the Elk Grove club would not lose its charter. He said he considered it more likely, instead, that members who choose to continue to back Miss Clark will be dropped from the Kiwanis membership rolls.

A majority of members of the local club voted to defy the order to oust Miss Clark, but Myerson said the vote did not reflect the sentiments of the entire club.

"There are too many members who have indicated they want to remain Kiwanians," Myerson told The Herald. "The club will probably lose some members who just don't want to abide by the Kiwanis constitution, which bars women from joining."

MISS CLARK was asked to join the club last February when her name was included in a bulk mailing. Her application and membership were processed through the international organization and approved without problems.

When the international became aware of its error, the local club was ordered to remove Miss Clark.

Myerson said he objects to the bad image he said the international has gotten because of the publicity surrounding the order.

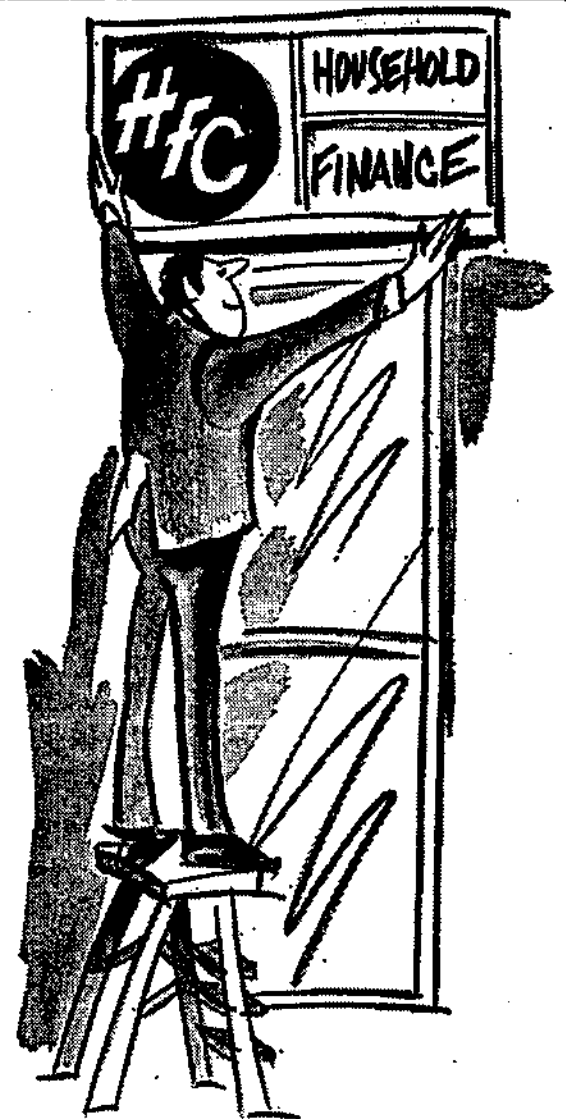

"Every man who wears the 'K' is a member of Kiwanis International. It's not some mystical group pulling strings," he said. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law. There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law. They broke their own by-laws."

RICHARD HARRELL, president of the Elk Grove chapter, said the club will continue to discuss its options in view of an order by the international to drop Miss Clark from its roster or lose its charter.

Harrell declined to comment on the options that are open to the local chapter.

"Until the club takes action, everyone can speculate on all of this, but I just don't want to say what will happen," he said. "Hopefully it will be evident after the meeting what direction the club will be taking."

The Elk Grove club was directed Oct. 7 to drop Miss Clark, 26, head librarian at the Elk Grove Public Library, in two weeks. The deadline was later extended by the international to give the local chapter time to reverse its decision to support Miss Clark.

'Right wing' support of Crane hit by Spence

In a last-minute campaign charge, Democrat Betty Spence has criticized U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th, for support he has received from two groups she described as right-wing.

But Crane responded by saying he is proud of his backing by the two organizations, the National Taxpayers Union and the National Assn. of Businessmen.

Mrs. Spence, who is opposing Crane in his bid for a third full term, also charged that Crane has misrepresented the amount of financial support she receives from labor unions.

Amount of financial support she receiving 80 per cent of her campaign funds from organized labor when in fact she has only received 61 per cent of her funds from unions.

But Crane responded that his figures also indicate a 61 per cent level of contributions by labor to Mrs. Spence's campaign.

At a press conference Friday, Mrs. Spence also charged that:

- Crane is affiliated with a publication called the Inflation Survival Letter, which preaches a theory of individual survival through the hoarding of gold, food and ammunition. (The publication lists Crane as a contributing editor.)
- Crane absented himself from Congress in October 1973, to enjoy a cruise aboard the rented Queen Elizabeth II to inspect an oil refinery in Canada, under the auspices of oil mogul John Shaheen.
- Mrs. Spence said eight members of the National Taxpayers Union are prominent contributors to right-wing conservative publications and organizations, and two of them are members of the John Birch Society.
- In response to Mrs. Spence's charges, Crane:
- Confirmed that he was acquainted with six of the eight persons named by

Mrs. Spence, and described one of them — Ludwig Van Mises, now deceased — as "one of the most respected economists in the world."

- Denied that he had any connection with the Inflation Survival Letter. Crane said he was not aware of the publication until he received inquiries about it during this campaign, and said he has instructed a staff aide to contact the publication and demand that his name be removed from its masthead.
- Confirmed that he and his wife had taken the Queen Elizabeth tour, at the invitation of Shaheen, a native of Tampico, Ill., and declared that he missed only routine votes in Congress during the cruise.

Crane said he is proud of his support from the National Taxpayers Union and the National Assn. of Businessmen. As part of his campaign literature, he has featured the NTU's 100 per cent rating of his voting record, and that the NAB rates him the "third best" member of the Congress on anti-inflation matters.

Mrs. Spence accused Crane of mounting a last-minute campaign of misrepresentation of both her finances and his own. She charged that only 3 per cent of his campaign financing comes from the 12th Congressional District, and that 74 per cent is from unidentified sources.

She also said that while Crane has said he returned $7,000 in contributions from special interest groups, that his own financial disclosure statements show only $600 has been returned.

In the squeaky-clean suburbs

How to be an election judge for a day

Tomorrow's election will bring each voter face to face with the people who really make an election happen: the polling place judges. This year, Herald staff writer Jill Bettner became an election judge to report on their training and activities election day. Her first report:

by JILL BETTNER

Armed with a raft of forms, affidavits, lists and rule books, election judges will man the polling places for Tuesday's general election. These ordinary citizens are charged with the responsibility of making sure the votes of every other ordinary citizen are properly cast, counted and recorded.

Figuring out just which forms are to be initialed, signed or countersigned will probably be the biggest headache most election judges will face in the Northwest suburbs, where political leaders on both sides claim elections are practically squeaky clean.

The words "vote fraud," weren't even mentioned, for example, at a training session for election judges conducted earlier this week by the Wheeling Township Republican Organization.

There was no talk of ghost voting and no warnings to judges to be on the lookout for the kinds of strong-arm tactics reportedly used by some Chicago Democratic precinct captains for years to get the vote out for Machine candidates.

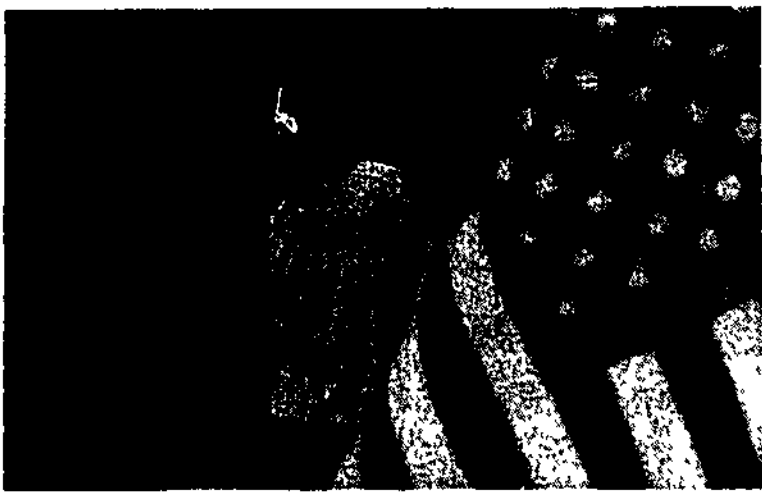

JUDGES WERE told to carefully verify voter registrations, watch how they assist voters and to check the credentials of anyone hanging around the polling places, but more time was spent discussing other procedures.

A panel of four Republican election judges described as having "over 20 years of experience between them" took turns going over various sections of the rule book prepared for judges by Cook County Clerk Stanley T. Kasper Jr.

The 24-page booklet outlining the duties and responsibilities of judges rivals a book of military regulations in the use of bureaucratic jargon.

It describes in detail which voters are to use which affidavits under what circumstances, who can vote by absentee ballot and how, legal and illegal ballot markings and how to prepare "tally lists," "certificate of results" and "special returns" forms. There is also information on write-in votes and several pages stating the penalties for anyone who violates election laws.

After translating much of the booklet for the benefit of about 10 new judges attending the training session, the "old-timers" offered some words of wisdom gained from experience.

THEY SUGGESTED, for example, that judges make sure there are available electrical outlets for the voting machines, adequate light for voters to see well enough inside the cardboard booths to mark paper ballots and that tables and chairs are provided for judges.

Novice judges were advised to get a good night's sleep to make it to the polling places by 5:30 a.m. and warned about the tricky procedure for opening the voting machines at the end of the day.

It also was recommended that judges pay special attention when completing the most important form of all — the election judge's payroll voucher. Judges will receive $25 each for serving and those who attended special training sessions, offered by Kasper's staff will get an additional $10.

In addition to the money, judges will also be provided with sweet rolls the morning of the election, but it was suggested that those working together in the same precinct get together sometime before Tuesday to discuss lunch plans.

THIS ELECTION will be easier for election judges to handle than some because there will only be two paper ballots, one to vote on a state constitution amendment and another to vote for University of Illinois trustees. All other ballots will be tabulated by machine.

In determining correct machine totals, judges will be required to multiply votes for state representative by 1, 1½ or 2. Even most of that work will be taken care of for judges because they will be given a "crib sheet" of answers already computed for many situations.

Despite assertions by both Republican and Democrat party officials that they do not expect problems more serious than those covered in the Republican organization's training session, judges and other poll workers have been urged by Chicago's anti-vote-fraud organization

Project LEAP (Legal Elections in All Precincts) to watch for any suspicious activities.

THE ORGANIZATION has conducted its own training for Chicago election judges in problem precincts since 1971. LEAP representatives have said if the organization learns of a substantial number of irregularities in Tuesday's election, it may become involved in training suburban election judges next year.

Judges presently are recruited and trained by township committeemen and their assistants. Five judges are assigned to each precinct and the number of Republican versus Democrat judges in each precinct is determined by the way the vote went in the precinct in the last gubernatorial election in 1972.

In the largely Republican Wheeling Township, for example, there will be three Republican and two Democrat judges in most precincts. In the precincts where the majority of votes cast were for Governor Daniel Walker, the numbers will be reversed with three Democrat judges and two Republican judges. If the precinct vote was split, judges are placed according to the way the vote went in the overall township.

Therefore, the majority of judges in precincts split in 1972 will be Republican for this election.

Herald opinion

Vote 'no' on blue ballot

The Herald recommends a "no" amendment to modify the governor's veto powers. Under the 1970 Illinois Constitution, the governor has the right to make an "amendatory veto" on a bill; that is, to make recommendations for changes without actually vetoing the entire bill.

Opponents of this law have proposed the blue ballot constitutional amendment as a curb to what they believe are unreasonable veto powers held by the governor. They charge that the amendatory veto power allows the governor to write legislation and thus steal a power away from the legislature.

But the amendatory veto, in our opinion, serves a valuable purpose, for it allows the governor to block "sneak" provisions which damage otherwise worthwhile legislation.

Without the governor's ability to amend legislation, an undesirable device called "conference committees" are used in the last days of the legislature to work out differences between House and Senate versions of the same bill.

That's where the pork-barrel riders are tacked onto legislation, and it creates the need for the amendatory veto to permit the governor to make desirable changes. Otherwise, he'd be forced to pass or veto the entire bill.

The amendatory veto power already has been partially defined by the Illinois Supreme Court, which ruled that Gov. Richard Ogilvie had exceeded the scope of the new power and had actually rewritten a bill, rather than merely amending portions of it.

If the amendatory veto power is to be changed, the courts are the best forum for change. A "no" vote tomorrow will reject an unwise legislative effort to change it by Constitutional amendment.

It isn't enough to ignore the blue ballot, for if you fail to vote "no" on it, you're increasing the statistical chances that this unfortunate measure will be approved. Vote first on the machine, and then mark your blue ballot "no" in order to preserve the governor's right of amendatory veto.

National races reviewed by United Press International

Here's a wrap-up of what to expect in tomorrow's Senate, House and gubernatorial races across the nation.

U.S. SENATE
After the 1968 elections, there were so many Democrats that some of them had to sit in a row of seats called the "Cherokee Strip" on the Republican side of the chamber.

No one expects a replay of 1968 this year. The Democrats are not going to have 75 senators after tomorrow's election.

But everyone, Republicans included, anticipate that the Democrats will tighten their control over the Senate — an unbroken dominance that now spans 20 years.

Going into the elections, the Democrats hold a 55-42 edge. While everyone expects the Democrats to add to their margin, the speculation runs anywhere from two to eight, with the common denominator four or five.

Six GOP incumbents are in danger of defeat. They are Sens. Peter H. Dominick of Colorado, Robert Dole of Kansas, Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky, Jacob K. Javits of New York, Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma and Milton Young of North Dakota.

Of the 34 Senate seats at stake, 20 are held by Democrats and 14 by Republicans, which on the surface would give the GOP more targets. But included in the 20 are Democratic seats in five Southern states, where the Republicans have no chance.

Outside the South, the Democrats are fielding such entrenched and seemingly unbeatable veterans as Sens. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington, Daniel K. Inouye of Hawaii, Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut and Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, plus seasoned but just as formidable candidates as Allan Cranston of California and Thomas Eagleton of Missouri.

That leaves the Republicans with slim pickings.

Their best bets to pick up seats are probably in Alaska, where the GOP's C.R. Lewis is challenging Mike Gravel; Nevada, where Sen. Alan Bible is retiring and the Republicans are going with former Gov. Paul Laxalt against Lt. Gov. Harry M. Reid; and Iowa, where Republican David Stanley is going against Rep. John C. Oliver for the seat being vacated by retiring Sen. Harold Hughes.

An outside possibility is in Indiana, where Indianapolis Mayor Richard Lugar is matched against Sen. Birch Bayh, and a long, long shot possibility is Bob Smith, challenging Sen. Frank Church in Idaho.

U.S. HOUSE
Speaker Carl Albert expressed genuine concern when polls indicated in the darkest days of Watergate that his Democratic party might pick up 50 or more U.S. House of Representative seats in November.

"It could be the end of the strong two-party system in this country and I don't want that," said the titular head of the congressional Democrats.

It would appear that Albert will not have that problem. Democratic observers now guess that after they've won a lot and lost a few the net party gain will settle at about 20.

Even a 35-seat turnover in favor of Democrats, who now hold a 248-187 majority in the 435-member House, would not be a landslide victory and would fall short of the 291 votes needed for the statistically "veto-proof" Congress against which President Ford and other Republicans have warned.

It takes two-thirds of those voting in each house to override a veto, which has happened once to Ford out of the eight vetoes he has cast in his less than three months in office.

"Off-year elections" for Congress traditionally work against the party controlling the White House. In the last six mid-term elections since 1950, the average such turnover in House seats has been 25. In the last three it has averaged 21. In 1966, during Lyndon Johnson's last term, Democrats lost 47 House seats.

GOP and Democratic strategists agreed in separate off-the-record briefings that Republican losses, ranging from one to three seats each, will come in California, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois.

This year a record number of incumbent House members — 28 Democrats and 24 Republicans, a total of 52 — are either retiring, have been defeated in primary elections or are running for other offices.

That means newcomers in both parties will be vying in races that for the most part must be rated a toss-up.

GOVERNORS

A total of 35 seats, now divided among 23 Democrats and 12 Republicans, are at stake. The 15 holdovers are nine Democrats and six Republicans.

The 32 governorships now held by the Democrats represent a party high since 1966, when the party went into the election with 33 seats. The recent record was 35 Democratic seats after the 1968 elections.

The Republicans reached a 20-year high of 32 governorships when the 1969 elections gave them both New Jersey and Virginia.

The recent record gain for one party came in the 1970 elections, when the Democrats made a net gain of 11 seats, beating Republicans in 13 states and losing to them in two. That changed the lineup to 29 Democrats and 21 Republicans.

Fourteen incumbent governors, eight Democrats and six Republicans are not running for reelection.

Democrat David Hall, Oklahoma, was defeated in the primary. Dale Bumpers, Arkansas, is running for the Senate. Jimmy Carter, Georgia; Kenneth Curtis, Maine; Bruce King, New Mexico, and John West, South Carolina, were barred from seeking reelection. John Burns, Hawaii, retired.

Republican Jack Williams, Arizona; Ronald Reagan, California; Thomas Meskill, Connecticut; and Stanley Hathaway, Wyoming, retired. Tom McCall, Oregon and Winfield Dunn, Tennessee, were barred from seeking reelection.

Three women are major candidates for governor. They are Democrat Ella Grasso in Connecticut and Republicans Louise Gore in Maryland and Shirley Crumpler in Nevada.

Don't! We'll learn to use it better!

Spence criticizes foes

Fence post letters to the editor

Last Friday The Herald announced its endorsement of my candidacy for the U.S. House of Representatives. Today (Thursday) the Fence Post contained five desperate letters from Mr. Crane's people. Certainly, the five people who support my opponent have the right to express their dissent, but these letters contained so many wild charges and gross factual errors that I feel I must reply. I can only surmise that Mr. Crane's people have become so confused and upset over the very real possibility of his defeat that they can no longer discriminate between fiction and fact.

For example, I am told, much to my surprise, that I advocate wage-price controls. Interestingly enough, I issued an 11-point program to combat inflation and nowhere in it did I even mention wage-price controls. Furthermore, whenever I have been asked about the effectiveness of wage-price controls, I have always said that they would not work unless applied totally and completely to all segments of the economy, including profits — something which I doubt would ever happen.

In another letter, from an obviously confused student, there is a very gross error stating that I want a "quota system" which would limit the amount of money business can spend outside of America. Unfortunately, this is the opposite of what I have said! I have made no comment at all about American business investing outside this country. The quotas I have advocated concern foreign investment in American companies — as exemplified by the recent attempt by the Arabs to buy IBM. I believe American control of American industries is essential. If we allow our vital industries to fall into foreign hands, we will be truly helpless in times of crisis. Thus a limit on foreign investment in our industry seems essential.

Another charge in true mud-slinging style concerns the issue of abortion. I am not now, nor have I ever been, "pro-abortion." I have consistently stated that this is a moral issue and that Congress and the Supreme Court should not be involved. The government should never have the very dangerous right to decide who should and who should not have babies.

The issue of Mr. Crane's residency has again been raised. I have lived in Buffalo Grove for over five years. I own a home there. I'm listed in the telephone directory. If anyone wants to find me it's very easy. Mr. Crane has represented this district for five years, but his legal voting address is a home in Mount Prospect owned and inhabited by a Mr. Randolph Bateman and family. Mr. Crane admits that he does not live there, nor has he ever. He claims to have rented an apartment "somewhere in the district," but refuses to disclose where. Our Congressman lived in Winnetka prior to his election in 1969. That was part of the district before reapportionment. But when he was elected he moved to Virginia. After reapportionment Winnetka became part of the 10th District. But Mr. Crane decided to run for election in our district anyway, even though he had never lived in it. For the past five years Phil Crane has been living in Virginia. For those same five years I have been living in Buffalo Grove. We all know this area has undergone monumental changes in that period. A representative is supposed to be "one of the people" — which is the main reason for residency requirements. Phil Crane may be fulfilling the letter of the law with his "voting address" and alleged apartment, but he obviously cares little about the law's intent.

Finally, I would like to comment on being called a "bleeding heart." I must say that if my heart bleeds for anyone it is the newest "endangered species" — the middle class. No one in Congress seems to care at all about those of us who are paying the bills for this country. Those who claim to be conservatives care only about the very wealthy — be they corporations or individuals. Liberals are primarily concerned with the poor and disadvantaged. But the middle class, the working people, the small farmer, the small businessman, are being ignored. These are the people I want to represent. I think it is too bad if Mr. Crane's supporters think that makes me a "bleeding heart." Perhaps if he were one of us he'd understand.

Seeks judicial shift

The first time that a judge runs for office in Illinois, he must be nominated in a primary election under a party label and then run in the election against judicial candidates of an opposing political party.

Because national policy candidates of each party, namely, U. S. Senator, members of the House of Representative and various state offices are on the same ballot and under the same party label as judges, elections of judges are determined by straight party voting, not on the qualifications of judges but by the popularity of "heads of the ticket," that is, the President, U. S. Senator or governor, as the case may be.

Once a judge is elected, he then "runs against himself" on a "retention" ballot on the question, should he be retained in office. If he receives 60 per cent of the votes cast, he is automatically retained in office.

In so serious a situation, the first election of a judge should be the result of careful consideration by the voters and careful casting of their ballots for the judges, themselves, and not by the vacuum cleaner style suction which now draws judges into office by votes cast for candidates for other offices — "heads of the ticket" candidates.

To cure this fault, I propose that we return to the once used method of holding judicial elections at a time separate from the policy office elections, so that the press, radio, television and civic groups can zero in on the qualifications of judicial candidates, both for the election of new judges and those on the retention ballot.

Hits Spence support

The Herald doesn't just "endorse for Congress" — it lumps all of "us suburbanites" together under its aegis and puts words in our mouths.

Proclaiming that Philip Crane's opponent's philosophy and program "are more compatible with majority views in the Northwest suburbs" doesn't make it so; it merely reflects what The Herald wants us to believe we all think.

Declaring that the opinions of Mr. Crane's opponent "are suburban in the sense that she represents how we as a suburban group of communities identify our problems and opportunities" (another press presumption), The Herald dismisses lightly her lack of expertise in national and world matters, as though we are not concerned with anything beyond the local province.

We are all Americans, whether we live in the suburbs, in the cities or in rural areas. The 12th District's interests are ably represented in the Congress of the United States by a well-read and well-spoken congressman who recognizes that the problems of our country are the problems of our district as well. Philip Crane, ever since his election five years ago, has shown logic and persistence in the fight against inflation, the scourge of every citizen.

Mr. Crane's knowledge of the functions and limitations of government is the result of years of study and practical application of political science and history; his efforts, based on that understanding, are vigorous, forthright and honest. Isn't that the kind of representation we need in Washington?

If you appreciate the need and the representation, vote to re-elect Philip Crane on Nov. 5. And remind a friend or two to vote — apathy allows someone else to have your say, and it might not match your thinking at all.

Machine needs the office, but does it need Elrod?

by BARRY SIGALE
Richard J. Elrod and I enter the conference room of Chief Circuit Court Judge John S. Boyle on the 25th floor of the Civic Center.

Taking his place at the opposite end of the 20-foot, nearly room-length table across from Boyle, Elrod snuggles comfortably into his chair. I sit quietly in a corner.

We are waiting for the regular meeting of the ad hoc committee of the Chicago Crime Commission to begin. It is a study group looking into ways to improve the criminal and judicial system. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley has a representative there, as does Chicago Police Chief James Rochford and State's Atty. Bernard Carey.

BOYLE CLEARS his throat, ostensibly to begin the proceedings. First, though, he looks at Elrod.

"Who is that?" Boyle asks, staring menacingly in my direction.

"He is a reporter, Judge. He's doing a story about my campaign," Elrod replies.

"He can't stay here," Boyle states flatly.

"Your honor," I protest. "I'm not doing a story on your meeting. I'm following Mr. Elrod for a story on his typical day."

Boyle asks the others at the table if the meeting is legally open to the press, a subject that has created a constant battleground between the media and government officials. The question never was resolved, the judge is told. It was determined that if the members of the press show up they could stay, but there would be no ballyhoo made to attract coverage.

"Well," Boyle says, apparently not listening. "If I want to chew out Bernard Carey I want to do so to his face without it winding up on the front page of Padlock Publications. Whether this meeting is open or not, I prefer that you leave."

Sensing I am unwanted, I leave the room, red-faced. Before I reach the door, Boyle glares at Elrod again. "As for you, Elrod, just who in the hell do you think you are bringing a reporter into this meeting?" Closing the door I can still hear Boyle in the waiting room, berating Elrod.

THE SHORT anecdote points up the kind of people the incumbent Cook County sheriff must deal with daily, whether it's an official business meeting or a campaign stop. It shows just how powerful and pompous Boyle is in the scheme of things. But more, it gives an indication that Elrod is perched in a vulnerable position... He's very important because the Democratic Party wants to politically control the office of sheriff, but he's not important enough that he can't be swatted down by a Daley crony like Boyle.

Elrod, 40, of Lincolnwood, early in the campaign was slightly paranoid about the ink Republican challenger Peter Bensinger was getting. Determined to do something about it, he has spent most of his non-working hours talking about the issues, in contrast to some other Democrats running for county offices who have taken a low profile.

From an early-morning breakfast with a dozen traditionally Republican-minded suburban publishers in Oak Brook to a Mexican fiesta celebrating the lifestyles of the people from south of the border, Elrod projects the image of a man who enjoys campaigning.

HANDICAPPED FROM the broken neck he suffered in 1969 when he tackled an antiwar demonstrator in downtown Chicago, Elrod is partially paralyzed and must get around on crutches with the aid of police bodyguards. But his position in government and charitable organizations has won him many friends from both sides of the political spectrum and enables him to elicit a warm response wherever he goes.

Observing Elrod in his office, one gets

RICHARD J. ELROD

Elrod, Bensinger on the issues:

Here is a brief summary of what Richard J. Elrod and Peter B. Bensinger have been saying during the campaign:

Elrod: "This campaign is my fourth for public office, and like every other campaign, is based upon positive and progressive proposals and issues." Indeed, through the campaign, Elrod has stressed his major accomplishments:

- A merit system for county correctional personnel.
- Establishment of a Youth Services Dept. to work with and counsel delinquent young people.
- An expanded and more cooperative working relationship with the 123 suburban police departments in Cook County.
- Expansion of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group, an organization combating hard-core, illegal drug traffic.

Bensinger: "People feel county government has gone on the wrong track.

ing you twice as much."

If it's true that campaigning is a grind, especially when the contestant is serving in office full-time, then an afternoon stop like the one at Jimmy Wong's Restaurant is a handy tranquilizer.

IT'S THE REGULARLY scheduled Friday-the-13th meeting of the Anti-Supernatural Society in which each and every member is required to smash mirrors, walk under ladders and pet black cats, all for the price of $13.13. The charge includes access to a free bar and all the food that can be consumed while the money goes to charity.

George Halas Sr. is standing in front of the building saying his Bears have become bulls this year. Then he sees Elrod getting out of his car. Like a spry, 22-year-old rookie halfback, Halas sprints

They feel negative about Elrod and what kind of job he's doing. And they agree with what kind of a job I'm going to do."

Bensinger says he will be free of any political party control. "I will present my budget, not (Chicago Ald.) Vito Marzullo's or Tom Keane's (former Chicago alderman)."

Bensinger adds that suburbanites' concerns are his concerns and that he plans to beef up security in the forest preserves and unincorporated areas, where 150,000 persons reside.

He also says he probably will fire Winston Moore, director of the county's department of corrections, divide suburban police coverage into three regions for better protection, revise MEG to include all suburban police departments and generally clean up what he refers to as the sheriff's department's patronage army.

out to shake hands. "Are you giving me some help?" Elrod asks professional football's elderly citizen. "You're 'bleeping' right," Halas responds.

The Jimmy Wong affair also is the only time that day Elrod and Bensinger meet face-to-face. It's picture-taking time and there are the two men, dutifully posing with a leggy model in front of a black vulture lovingly referred to as Gerald Ford.

Elrod makes several more political appearances this day and repeats the theme. In essence, he says, it is on the basis of doing a day's work for a day's pay without fanfare that he seeks reelection. That, plus a surrog to-around approach to the business of campaigning and the support of the Democratic Party machine makes Elrod a favorite to serve another four years as sheriff of Cook County.

Pete Bensinger: the boy next door wants to be sheriff

by BARRY SIGALE

Pete B. Bensinger is suave, sophisticated and genteel... fringes benefits that come with being independently wealthy. His entrance into the political arena, then, is somewhat of an anachronism.

Confronting potential voters at commuter train stops and shopping centers doesn't seem to become a member of the family that founded the Brunswick Corp., a multi-million-dollar sporting goods-producing conglomerate whose success has enabled Bensinger to accumulate several hundred thousand dollars from a trust fund bearing his name.

Bensinger is a graduate of Yale University, where he was a track man. He lives with his wife, Judy, a physician, in an apartment in a posh Near North Side Chicago neighborhood. They regularly attend performances of the world famous Chicago Symphony Orchestra (Judy is head of the Orchestral Assn.'s women's junior governing board). Their names often pop up in society columns. And, while Dr. Bensinger practices part-time at Inner-city Head Start health centers, her husband is jobless in day-and-night pursuit of his election goal.

IT IS WRONG to say Bensinger doesn't have the necessary credentials to serve as the county's $29,500-a-year sheriff. He was a business executive at Brunswick Corp. until entering state government five years ago. His most notable positions were chairman of the Illinois Youth Commission, director of the state Dept. of Corrections and executive director of the Chicago Crime Commission, all jobs in which he was appointed. It's just that he seems out of place on the handshaking circuit. For all his money and grace, he still commits awkward, but necessary, acts of courage in the public eye.

LIKE THE NIGHT a month ago when Ella Fitzgerald sang at Mill Run Theater in Niles. A good portion of the seats were filled with Bensinger supporters as part of a fund-raiser. Bensinger placards were everywhere, as was the candidate himself, shaking hands and passing out literature with his picture and words on it.

When the gracious Miss Fitzgerald finished her usual rouling range of songs and was receiving a standing ovation, Bensinger hopped up on stage with Illinois' Miss Black Teenager on one arm and an arrangement of roses on the other to give to the songstress.

"Ella," said the graying 36-year-old candidate, "you were marvelous as always." It was a good start, but then he said, "Thank you for being at my evening." Then, "I'm sure everyone here knows we can have a better system of justice in this country." The non-Bensinger fans booed and Ella fidgeted, unaccustomed as she is to being upstaged, as the speech went on. Sensing his good intentions had turned the moment sour, Bensinger changed course. "And I'm sure everyone will agree that on Nov. 5 (louder booing) Ella Fitzgerald will get a tremendous amount of write-in votes." Right on! Applause.

THE JACK LEMMON look-alike is a handsome man. When he meets and greets people on the street they seem pleased by his charming, well-groomed smile and good manners. The ladies, especially, are thrown by him.

On a Northwest Side elevated train platform overlooking Sheridan Road, Bensinger waits for the early-morning commuters to receive his campaign handouts on street level and hike up to board the downtown-bound cars.

"Ladies, welcome to the platform," he says to a group of out-of-breath women. "You look just like you do on television," one of them replies, giggling. "I see you've got my card," he says. "You know what I want to add to that? A personal handshake. And have a good day."

To all the grumpy, sourpussed commuters who are tired of looking every day at all the other grumpy, sourpussed commuters, Bensinger is a bright spot in their morning. His whole way of conducting himself, in fact, his highly personable style and dash, makes him a glamorous attraction.

ONE OF THE REQUISITES of a good campaigner, Bensinger says, is a sense of humor, and he displays it every chance he gets.

"I can't put heels on your shoes, ma'am," he says to a woman in a shopping center shoe repair shop, "but I can remove some of the heels from the streets."

While shoppers are pushing their carts through a Jewel Food Store aisle he quips, "Choose the brand carefully. And choose my brand of sheriff."

In a jewelry store, "I don't want to lift anything. I want to protect it," he tells the salesmen.

He is more serious with other people he meets. "Do we have a sheriff in Cook County?" a man asks Bensinger. "We do and he needs replacing," says Bensinger.

OVER LUNCH AT A candidate gathering with the Women's Republican Club of Park Ridge in an Edison Park Church, Bensinger woos the ladies again. "There is a growing fear," he says, "that we have become prisoners in our own home." The women shake their heads in agreement. "Some of us are afraid to use the parks and the recreation areas. The sheriff has a responsibility to the people. We need more police protection, not less."

BENSINGER HAS NOT forgotten the Northwest suburban vote. At a stop at the Thunderbird Bowl in Mount Prospect, Bensinger works his way through all 36 lanes, one by one, shaking the hand of each and every one of the 180 women in the Monday afternoon league. When he says good-bye on the loudspeaker, they all applaud, as if he personally has added 20 pins to their games.

The most important hour on the schedule is a Republican fund-raiser at the University Club in Chicago. There, Bensinger mills around, pumping hands of influential businessmen whose money the party covets. In a corner are two party pros who fill in Bensinger about the facts of political life.

First, Floyd Fulle, Cook County commissioner from Des Plaines and a longtime press degrader. "They'll (the press) talk about the good things before you get elected," he says. "But then they'll turn on you when you're in office."

And then, there is former Gov. Richard Ogilvie, sitting in an armchair, puffing on a pipe. Dripping with melancholy, he says, dully, "I was a politician, once."

RTA emergency funds available

Applications for emergency funding from the Regional Transportation Authority will be available at 4 p.m. today.

The RTA board will decide this morning how to handle evaluation of the forms, but the members completed details Friday that will allow the forms to be printed and distributed by today.

Suburban bus companies and some commuter railroads are expected to seek the emergency funding, which is to be given only to carriers in danger of going out of business. The RTA board set up the emergency funding plan because of the deadlock in selecting a chairman, which is the key to establishing a working agency.

Forms will be distributed in RTA temporary headquarters at the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, 300 N. State St., Room 1005.

Accuracy main problem in ranking

Suburban voters forced to decide among 71 candidates for judgeships

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The once-paper list of judicial candidates has moved to Cook County voting machines for Tuesday's election, but the decision-making will not be easier.

Seventy-one candidates, who seek either retention or election as judges, will be listed on suburban ballots.

To aid voters, three organizations — the Chicago Bar Assn., the Chicago Council of Lawyers and the Independent Voters of Illinois — review and rank judicial candidates.

The ranking processes differ. The results often disagree. The problem of accuracy is immense.

In 1974, most Democratic candidates are current judges who were appointed to fill Circuit Court vacancies by the Illinois Supreme Court. No Republican Circuit Court candidate is a current judge, creating "an inherent imbalance in the nature of the information available about the candidates," the Council of Lawyers said.

THE RESULTS OF membership surveys by the two law groups indicate political leanings of members who participated in the surveys. The Chicago Bar Assn. found only four current Democratic judges who are seeking retention "not qualified," although the Council of Lawyers' total was 13 and the IVI count was 15.

The bar association also endorsed all Democrats running in contested races. In three of the 21 races, Republicans "shared" endorsement with Democrats because the vote was within five per cent.

The key agreement of the three organizations involved the "not qualified" rating of four Circuit Court judges seeking retention — James Crosson, Alphonse Wells, Herbert Friedlund and David Lefkowitz.

CROSSON RECEIVED a 47 per cent rating from the bar association. The Council of Lawyers said Crosson, a Law Division Judge, is "one of the worst and incompetent judges on the bench."

Wells, who recently was transferred from the criminal to the law division, lacks legal knowledge, is biased toward state prosecutors and unqualified, the Council of Lawyers said. Wells received the lowest rating, 39 per cent, of retention candidates in the bar association poll.

Friedlund, a Divorce Division judge with a 46 per cent bar association rating, is "typically mechanical" in setting alimony and child support payments, the Council of Lawyers said.

Lefkowitz, 74, was one of seven judges who received "not qualified" lawyers' council ratings because of age. Illinois law requires mandatory retirement at 70, but the seven candidates are protected by a "grandfather" clause in the 1964 state judicial law.

Other retention candidates who are older than 70 include: Joseph Burke, 68, an Appellate Court candidate; Robert Hunter, 74, Emmett Morrissey, 70, Charles Horan, 74, John Dempsey, 73, and George Fiedler, 70.

DESPITE THEIR AGES, Dempsey, an Appellate Court retention candidate, Horan and Hunter were rated "qualified" by the council. Hunter is presiding judge in the Divorce Division and was called its "best judge."

The IVI and the Council of Lawyers agreed on "not qualified" ratings for other retention judges who received bar association endorsement with the lowest percentage votes.

Rated "not qualified" by the council and IVI (with Council of Lawyers' comments in parentheses) were George Fiedler (age 70, limited legal ability); Helen McGillicuddy (humane and sensitive in adoption cases but lacking legal ability); Edward Phuedrak (mechanical); Robert Sulski (found guilty by the Illinois Courts Commission of prejudicial conduct in 1974); Louis Wexler (weak and indecisive) and Frank Wilson (state-minded, lacks diligence, biased against black defendants).

NATHAN COHEN, a Chancery Division judge, received a confusing rating. Cohen was second lowest in the bar association percentage ranking and is "not qualified" according to the IVI. But the lawyers' council added a "qualified" rating, despite a report that he "is widely described as being among the worst offenders in the practice of seeking out every opportunity to appoint 'cronies' to fill lucrative positions as guardians receivers."

Cohen has "substantial legal ability," the council said.

In contested, non-retention races, four candidates were rated "outstanding" by the Council of Lawyers — Edward Egan of the Appellate Court, Paul Gerrity of the Municipal Division, Joseph Schneider, chief of the county's mental health court, and John Nordberg, a Republican and attorney since 1950.

LOLA FLAMM
OF COOK COUNTY

Lola Flamm is a former member of the Evanston Township High School Board and the League of Women Voters. She has been endorsed by the Chicago Tribune, Chicago Daily News and the Chicago Sun-Times.

ALICE IHRIG
COUNTY ASSESSOR
OF COOK COUNTY

Alice Ihrig is a member of the Oak Lawn Village Board...former State chairman of the League of Women Voters...and a leader of a drive to realign tax assessments in Oak Lawn which put more than $1.5 million of property on the tax rolls.

Alice Ihrig and Lola Flamm will clean up the bribes, vote fraud, tax deals, and "fixed" assessments that are costing YOU money. The offices of County Clerk and Assessor have been rocked by scandal after scandal, indictment after indictment, conviction after conviction. Yet, for the boys downtown, it's business as usual.

Alice and Lola know the score. They know that if Cook County government is ever going to be honest and open, it's going to take their hard work and YOUR VOTE to do the job. Both women have been endorsed by the Independent Voters of Illinois and the Independent Precinct Organization.

Chicago Tribune

(AUGUST 6, 1974)

"Mrs. Flamm, Mrs. Ihrig are highly qualified...Indeed, much better than average—candidates with a will and chance to win and the ability to serve county government well..."

WBBM News Radio 78

(OCTOBER 22, 1974)

"...Mrs. Ihrig has had a distinguished career...she will enter office with obligations to no one. We think that is precisely the reason she should be elected."

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

(OCTOBER 11, 1974)

Mike Royko "Alice Ihrig is intelligent, talented and probably the best candidate running for any local office..."

Independent Voters of Illinois

The Independent Voters of Illinois said Alice Ihrig has "...sharp vision into the inner workings of urban government...expertise in zoning and taxing that will bring informed leadership to the Assessor's Office."

Chicago Tribune

(OCTOBER 5, 1974)

Political Editor, Neil Mehler: "Alice Ihrig is a plenty smart woman..."

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

(OCTOBER 7, 1974)

"The Office of Cook County Clerk demands a person of high integrity dedicated to the nonpartisan administration of elections and public service. Lola Flamm is the candidate...who best meets those standards."

Chicago Tribune

(OCTOBER 8, 1974)

"A vote for Republican Lola Flamm is a vote for good government—efficient, dedicated, and above all, honest government."

CHICAGO Sun-Times

(OCTOBER 6, 1974)

"The public needs Lola Flamm's energy, independence and integrity...In short, we believe she will be a breath of spring air in county government, and strongly urge voters to mark for her on November 5."

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Suddenly, he's impotent

My husband is 56 and appears to be in good health. He is active physically and likes to hunt and fish. He is 5 feet 11 inches and weighs 175 pounds.

We have always had a good marriage and have two daughters and one son, all grown and away from home. Now all at once he isn't able to have sex anymore. He tries but nothing happens, no response at all. What could be the problem?

Do you suppose this means he has been having an affair with another woman? Or, does it mean he doesn't really care for me anymore? He is still loving and tries to make it up to me in other ways, but our sex life is nonexistent.

I've tried to get him to see a doctor, but he says he feels fine and doesn't want to. What do you think?

Impotence is a symptom, not a diagnosis. Of course, he should see a doctor and find out what the symptom means.

Many men are afraid to see a doctor about any problems related to sexual function. They seem to think this is too great a shame to share with someone else. So they suffer, often needlessly, in silence. So do their wives, many voicing or thinking the thoughts you express.

IMPOTENCE OFTEN is psychological. It may be related to factors the person is totally unaware of. It often requires professional help to solve these problems. Sometimes the whole thing is related to self-confidence. A failure, even after an evening of too many cocktails, will be overemphasized and fear of failure takes over. When the man's confidence is restored, sometimes even with a useless medicine he has faith in, his capacity may return as if by magic.

In other instances impotence is an indication of illness. It can be a sign of unrecognized diabetes. In these problems the diabetes affects the nerves to the sexual organs and the normal mechanisms no longer work. Early control of diabetes probably helps to prevent this complication.

There are now techniques, some experimental and others fairly well accepted, where selected patients can have a flexible splint implanted which helps a great deal for impotence from nerve involvement in diabetes or after surgery. They have no place in treatment of impotence from psychological causes.

IMPOTENCE can be a symptom of circulation problems to the pelvic area. A careful examination of the circulation may demonstrate the cause. Some types of surgery in selected patients will relieve the problems.

A small number of problems are related to decreased output of male hormone. This usually involves a somewhat older man. Even so, about half of men 75 years or older are still potent, and there are medical records of men well over 100 who have remained completely potent in all respects.

Encourage your husband to see a doctor. He is not at all unusual, and he needs to find out what the problem is and get the proper help.

Radioactive fat treatment may help in cancer detection

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A breath test given after digestion of a tiny radioactive butter fat capsule has been 87 per cent effective in detecting cancerous tumors and may hold the key to early detection of the disease, Medical College of Virginia researchers say.

The carbon-14-laced capsule developed mainly by Dr. Giovanni Costa is given orally to suspected cancer patients. Twenty-four hours later the breath test is administered to measure the presence of radioactive carbon dioxide.

Research on humans and animals has shown that amounts of radioactive carbon dioxide above a certain level indicates the presence of a tumor.

COSTA SAID THAT while cancer's eroding effect on fat has been known for some time, it isn't known if tumors accelerate fat breakdown or whether they short circuit the normal metabolizing of fats.

Costa said the test was administered to 160 persons including healthy volunteers, known cancer victims, persons with illnesses other than cancer, and persons with undiagnosed illnesses.

Costa said in several cases involving unknown illnesses the capsule-breath test indicated cancer with subsequent examinations revealing the presence of tumors, some of them "very tiny."

He said the carbon-14 level is the exhaled carbon dioxide was generally higher for cancer victims than for others and the test was about 90 per cent effective when given to known cancer patients. The most current general cancer detection test is about 60 per cent accurate.

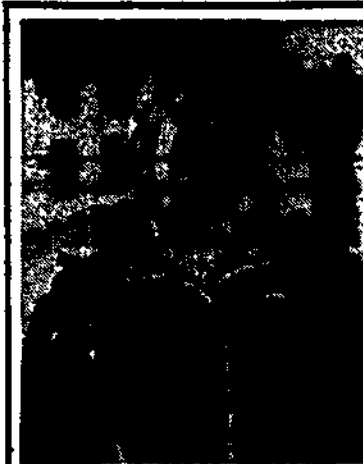

AN MCV SPOKESMAN said there were a few "false positive" results when the breath test was administered, notably among patients with high fever, overactive thyroid and cirrhosis of the liver.

The spokesman said the first two ailments are known to erode fat stores, but that the positive result from the cirrhosis patient was a mystery.

Toni O'Donnell T-shirts

Gifts that really glitter

by KAREN THOMPSON

Toni O'Donnell is a lady with talent and time. She is a master at all the popular crafts and has gone a step further to invent some of her own.

Her newest endeavor is sequin-beckled shirts, each with a unique, individualized pattern. Mrs. O'Donnell calls them "hobbies and sports shirts."

"It started out as my way to give novel gifts that were meant for my friends alone — a thought just for them," said Mrs. O'Donnell, of Mount Prospect. But, everyone who saw the shirts found patterns that reminded them of a certain someone. Now Toni is busy putting together orders for friends, relatives and friends of friends. Her three daughters also wear her designs.

The intricate workmanship must be viewed to be appreciated. For the sewing buff, Mrs. O'Donnell has created a pattern incorporating spoils of crimson and kelly green thread, a tape measure complete with numbers and quarter-inch marks, a silver thimble and a needle pulling thread.

A golfer might choose a model with a green tee centered with a red flag, tiny white balls of pearl and silver clubs. Many of the designs combine several objects, yet they remain delicate and easily recognizable — truly eye-catching.

For her friend the martini-drinker, Toni sculpted, on a black background, a glass of gold sequins. The finishing touch was a green olive stuffed with a red pimento. In the same vein was her rendition of a champagne glass, bursting with bubbly.

"I have patience because I like to see the picture emerge," said Mrs. O'Donnell. "I think I'm a frustrated artist at heart."

Besides a natural talent for handwork, Toni has plenty of time for crafts. Her kidneys no longer function, making it necessary for her to spend six hour periods, three times a week, having her blood purified through dialysis.

"With kidney disease, I don't often sleep well at night and I stay close to home during the day. So, instead of wasting that time, I do something constructive. This is my latest project," said the petite, vivacious lady.

"I would rather work and be creative with my hands than anything else in the world," she said. "I'm fortunate that it comes naturally."

She is also a perfectionist. "It's often hard to get the seed pearls where I want them. Many times an object isn't the way I had pictured it so I go back and do it again," she continued.

In addition to her current beading, bingie, Mrs. O'Donnell embroiders, knits, sews, does crewel work, needlepoint and any other craft imaginable. Her flower-laden bathroom hangings, made from bath towels, were sold in several area stores a few years ago.

"I switched to the shirts because I can do them sitting down. My health isn't as good as it was before," she said. "I consider these crafts hobbies, not a business, but when I stopped to figure out the profit on my bathroom pictures, I realized that I was making them for nothing."

Toni likes the designing segment of her creations the best. "I hate making the shirts," she confessed. She prefers that people ordering them purchase or sew the shirts themselves. She will then adorn the shirts with colorful, unique designs, of which she has more than 25 already mapped out.

Toni welcomes new ideas, however. The biggest projects, "taking three times the amount of time and beads," are the bicycle, the tennis racket and the plant, which she designed for her daughter with the green thumb.

Using a family 10-speed bike for a model, Toni has come up with a resplendent replica with silver spokes, curving handlebars and a streamlined body. The tennis racket, is an elaborate maze of webbing, with a colorful handle for pizzazz. A favorite for children is the rhinestone rabbit with a puff of yarn for Peter's cotton tail and tiny silver whiskers.

Toni first designs a pattern that would lend itself to beading, then transfers the pattern onto a shirt with ordinary tracing paper. Next, the work begins, with each bead stitched on separately. She uses a combination of slender, tubular beads for straight lines, rounded pearls or rhinestones for curves and sequins for a fluffy, overlapping effect as on the foaming soda glass or Santa's beard.

The shirts Toni has fashioned for her friends have definite messages behind them. There's the telephone, which she made for a departed neighbor with whom she spends much time conversing over the wires. There's a champ shirt for another friend who excels in many sports.

"The hardest part of this craft is lettering," said Mrs. O'Donnell, "because it is difficult to find beads small enough." It takes her on the average of five hours to bead one shirt. They're personalized presents — glittering gifts.

TINSELED T-SHIRTS will tickle everyone's imagination. Mrs. Toni O'Donnell, Mount Prospect, is the mind behind the designs. She wears the golfer's special and displays the Easter bunny and bookworm models.

Western favorite leisure-time wear

Fashion

by Karen

The cowboy may be the most popular, enduring character ever to appear on the American scene. He gives off an aura of color and lives a life of freedom. We've all been cowboys at one time in our lives.

Rough-riding clothes for men have been cantering around for years, but this year the trend is at a gallop. Even the business-suited men who board the train in the morning appreciate the down-home favorites when they return to leisure at night.

The Western look offers heavy-duty fashions for any weather or any activity. It provides fashion with comfort and easy care.

Jeans were the starting point. They have taken over in the White House, in high schools — just about everywhere. They're old stand-bys, but this year the variety of new styles is overwhelming.

RANCH-INSPIRED shirts feature peaked yokes trimmed in contrasting binding or stitching and double breast pockets. Peaked collars look especially earthy with a bandanna tied around the neck. Flannel and horse blanket plaid overshirts provide warmth when a campfire is out of the question.

Western jackets with sheepskin linings gave the Marlboro man that special look. How about you?

To complete the wardrobe of comfort, durability and honest styling is the footwear making headlines. Boots in every shape and style are coming on strong. Wyatt Earp knew the importance of sturdy constructed shoes. Cowboy boots come in a multitude of scroll-stitched designs and in updated denim and new colors.

Some Saturday-afternoon sociologists speculate that the blatant Western fashion trend may signify a masculine "so there" reaction to the advancement of the Women's Liberation movement. I don't think that's true. Who can brush off the most sensible fashion rage of the century with light speculation?

FOR WOMEN WHO enjoy a Saturday shopping in the city, the Hyatt Regency Chicago is featuring a special shopper's luncheon from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. every Saturday in the hotel's Mrs. O'Leary's Restaurant. Fashions are from Bonwit Teller.

For the Nov. 9 show furs will be on parade.

Carson Pirie Scott & Co. is welcoming the warmth of Iceland to its Chicago stores. Straight from Reykjavik is a collection of Arctic sheep wool coats, sweaters, ponchos, jackets and wraps. Each garment is 100 per cent Icelandic virgin wool in natural shades of white, black, brown and grey. No dyes are used so that the natural lanolin retained in the yarn makes each garment water repellent and wind resistant. The Icelandic Shops also carry matching accessories — mittens, deep rolled knit caps and 6-foot mufflers.

Trend setter

Everyone is trying to think up ways to save money these days. It has come to be the new national pastime.

Of course, every nationwide trend is experienced by my trend-setting best friend and next-door neighbor, Alice Flaxton. Alice excitedly called me over for coffee the other day to see what I thought of her new money-saving idea.

"Now watch this," Alice demanded as she took my cup of coffee and poured half of it on the kitchen table.

"Hey! my coffee!" I began to protest, but Alice went right on.

"Now with the article in my right hand I will mop up this half of the coffee, and with the article in my left hand I will wipe up the other half."

I WAS REALLY interested in a fresh cup of coffee, but I watched Alice with the same sort of mesmerized interest I take in TV commercials.

"Hmmm," I couldn't help observing, "the item in your right hand absorbed the coffee quicker — and twice as much as the one in your left hand."

"Right," Alice said eagerly, "and it's stronger, too!" She wrung both things out energetically, replacing the spilled coffee on the table and splattering a little on my glasses. The thing in her left hand fell apart. The one in her right stayed whole.

Next Alice made me hold samples of each while she poured coffee through them. Then we used each to scour out her sink, which we first stained with coffee. In each case the item in her left hand could not compare in performance with the one in her right.

"AMAZING, ALICE!" I said with genuine admiration but a little sadness because the coffee had been used up in the demonstrations.

"But that's not the best part!" she exclaimed.

"What's that?" I asked, trying to hide my symptoms of caffeine withdrawal.

"I can throw this one in the washer," she waved the one in her right hand, "over and over again. I can wax floors with it, dust with it, polish silver with it, stuff a broken window with it."

"Incredible. The other product surely couldn't do all that."

"You're right," Alice agreed. "But that's not the best part yet."

"No?" I said unbelievably.

"NO. THE BEST part is that the inferior product is 64 cents a roll, and this one," she waved the article in her right hand, "is free!"

"Wow!" Now I had forgotten all about the coffee. "What do you call it?"

"A rag. It's one of Henry's worn out T-shirts."

I told Alice that with good marketing she could sell millions of her invention, but she modestly said she was willing to share her secret with everyone.

"I'm conducting further research in the field of combatting high paper product prices," she added. "And I'm about to come up with a cloth napkin, a cloth handkerchief and a lunch box."

I went back home and fixed myself a cup of coffee while thinking of Alice in amazement. I don't see how she always manages to be so far ahead of her time.

Woman at sea

The ship's first officer wears skirts

by GAY PAULEY

HAMILTON, Bermuda — Arja Tytti Marjatta Rauramo claims no pioneering part in careers for women in her role as first officer aboard a luxury passenger ship.

Miss Rauramo already has finished her formal training for master's license, which means she'll be qualified to skipper ships.

"I'm not the first in the world," said this lovely brunette of 29 years. "In Russia, the men and women have always been equal in the maritime. I just happened to be the first woman in Finland."

Her employer, Flagship Cruises, believes she is the first to attain first officer rank in Scandinavia as well as in the whole world of cruise ships.

In contrast, the maritime industry in the United States has just opened its doors to women, permitting enrollment in the four-year course at the U.S. Maritime Academy, Kings Point, N. Y.

THE RULE that women might work toward a commission in the U.S. Naval Reserve came from the Commerce Department, which runs the service academy. The 14 women who entered Kings Point last August are still there studying with 320 men in the first year class.

Miss Rauramo is the first mariner in the family. A grandfather was a priest; other relatives were lawyers; her father teaches languages.

She took secretarial courses and trained for law before, compelled "by something I'd always wanted to do," she went to sea.

Aboard the 626-passenger Sea Venture she ranks with two male first officers, all of whom share duties ranging from computerized satellite navigating to checking supplies to flying bridge duty when moving in and out of port.

Her apparel on board is a tailored, gold-buttoned jacket, skirt just covering the knee in white or navy, with the visored cap traditional for officer uniforms.

HER BELOW-SHOULDER length hair, except for bangs, is tucked up under the cap when she's on duty. And certainly she wears lipstick — "a little never hurts."

Duty on a cruise ship is a much cleaner job than those she's had on cargo runs where she added up years of sea experience, plying the ports along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts. Then it was dirt and wind and trousers while she chipped rust, painted and climbed right alongside the men.

There's only one sailor in port for her, a Finnish sea captain based in New Orleans "who's waited for me six years, although we don't get to see each other often."

(United Press International)

THROUGH SHE trained as a secretary and studied law, Arja Tytti Marjatta Rauramo preferred a life at sea. She's the first woman officer in the world of luxury cruisers and after several more months of sea duty, she will qualify to captain a liner.

Heart Association can help with low cholesterol diets

Dear Dorothy: You answer so many different kinds of things, I'm hoping you can help with this. Our doctor has told me and my husband that our cholesterol counts are too high, and we have to cut down on our cholesterol intake. All he gave in the way of advice was to cut out eggs and meat fats. I'm sort of baffled. Might there be organizations set up to help people like us? —Judith Garland

Your predicament isn't at all unusual. Doctors mean well, but I often wish so many of them weren't so busy and took the time to give out diet charts in cases like this. But there is rescue at hand. Get in touch with the closest American Heart Association chapter and ask for booklets on the subject. They have some excellent ones — including recipes. I've tried some of them. Not only are they easy to prepare but quite good.

Dear Dorothy: I have a very good suitcase which has a musty smell. I've used a spray disinfectant and also washed it out with a baking soda solution. The odor is still there — Mrs. Jean Pelle

After you sprayed, you should have aired the suitcase. There are still two things you might do. Sprinkle the inside of the case with the granules used to line kitten boxes and leave the case closed for 24 to 48 hours. Activated charcoal granules work the same way. These do remarkable things with odors, and I hope one does the job.

Trying to hem up a long nylon skirt for my daughter, I almost gave up as the material was so filmy. Finally put a few pins in the front with the appropriate length, then pinned the skirt to the living room rug at the waist and a few pins here and there in the skirt to keep it smooth and even. I was then no trick to pin the whole hem on the rug so that it hung straight all around.

(Mrs. Rita welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

New higher interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now U.S. Savings Bonds pay 8% interest when held to maturity.

Here's how it works: The higher interest rate applies to all new Bonds purchased since December 1, 1973, raising their rate from 5½% to 6% when held to maturity. And the maturity period on Series E Bonds is shorter, too. Now E Bonds mature in 5 years, with a first-year rate of 4½%.

Series H Bonds, with a 10-year maturity, will earn 5% the first year; 5.8% for the next four years; and 6½% for the last five years. This gives you an average 6% yield over the 10-year period.

It works for Bonds you now hold, too. There's no reason to redeem your older Bonds to buy new ones.

Their yield has improved, too.

All outstanding E Bonds will receive a ½% increase in yield for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973, payable upon redemption. This also applies to any Freedom Shares you may still hold.

All outstanding H Bonds will receive a ½% yield increase for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973. This is payable in the form of increased semiannual interest payments.

It all works to your advantage. Now, more than ever, it makes sense to buy higher-paying U.S. Savings Bonds and hold them to maturity or beyond.

Kiwanian speaks

'Woman' problem

All that negative publicity we members of Kiwanis International in general and members of local suburban Chicago chapters, in particular, are getting due to that "tempest in a teapot . . ." problems resulting from retention of a woman as a member against the provisions of the organization's constitution by Elk Grove Kiwanis all male chapter; has got to be put into perspective.

While the city and local press are having a field day with banner headlines and feature articles, picturing a cute girl so cruelly discriminated against by those fun-loving, male-oriented "sexist" Kiwanians, not one in 10 of your readers actually knows what we are really all about.

We are a voluntary service community organization, composed of business and professional men. The funds we raise are spent locally for communal needs. We give freely of our time and effort and richer spiritually for it.

The problem for us Kiwanians, as far as women membership is concerned, is twofold: 1) As members of Kiwanis International, either we obey our own rules and regulations voted by our own representatives in annual conventions, or if not happy with its ruling we change them lawfully through voting or any other legal means at our disposal. 2) as an individual member, I personally like to play by the rules, as a human being I have no objection to women joining any local chapter if its membership so desires. We definitely could use more "home rule" and more members for that matter.

Boosts paramedics

The Friendly Circle of St. John United Church of Christ in Arlington Heights at a recent meeting hosted the paramedics of Arlington Heights who gave a demonstration of the valuable assistance immediately available to the community in response to a call for aid in many acute developing health and rescue problems.

After watching the demonstration, one member, Mrs. Gertrude Behrens a short time later had need for assistance and attributes her knowledge obtained to call them might have been a contributing factor to a quicker recovery for her.

We are grateful to have such capable service available which to many of us was very vague until this direct demonstration showed us how alert and helpful they actually are. Thank you again for your everready response to that call!

A happy 100th

Plum Grove Nursing Home had occasion to celebrate the 100th birthday of Amanda Schoppe on Oct. 13. I would like to say thank you to all those who made the day such a memorable one for her and her family. Aside from the good wishes from all the residents of the community she received greetings from U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, Senators Percy and Stevenson and Governor Walker. Mr. Wendell Jones, president of the village of Palatine, presented her with roses and a proclamation. A very special thanks to Rev. Arnie Koriath; Sigma Kappa Sorority; Mrs. Dolores Stewart and Camille, who furnished music; Mr. Michael Moorman for engraved napkins; Palatine Chamber of Commerce for flowers and finally, the volunteers and members of my staff who made it all possible.

Schaumburg's paramedics cheered

I would like to publicly commend and thank both the Schaumburg police and the Schaumburg fire department for the speed and efficiency with which they responded to my call for help.

The other night a newly prescribed drug reacted in an unpredicted manner affecting my wife's heart. When we realized we needed help fast I simply dialed the operator who immediately connected me with the Schaumburg police to relay my need to the fire department. Before I could even get my shoes and shirt on, the trucks were in front of the house and two

Until we formed our new local chapter in Arlington Heights, I was a member of Elk Grove Kiwanis. It is hard to find a nicer group of guys and the new member Mary Clark, whom I met at a recent inner-club meeting, couldn't be nicer, yet in all frankness, if I was still a voting member of that chapter I would vote against her retention. One, because as stated above, I believe in playing by the rules (I don't like the alternatives), and secondary, because I enjoy being a Kiwanian and my wife simply wouldn't stand for mixed group meetings.

There, I let the cat out of the bag. Why do you think there is so little static from wives in all-male service clubs, be it Kiwanians, Lions or Rotarian?

'Let's expand present library'

Fence post

letters to the editor

At the board of trustees meeting on Oct. 1, a substantial number of people stood and voiced their opinion against a new library. On the other hand, there was only one who spoke in favor of it. Citizens from school age to senior citizen age were represented. Their views in opposition to a new library were:

- Out children have fine school libraries.
- With a new library to pay for, our taxes will be about 142 per cent of what they are now.
- Senior citizens with fixed incomes may not be able to afford it.
- Birth rates and school enrollment is down.
- Construction costs have risen even since the proposed cost of $3.2 million. Actual costs may be nearer 4 million.
- Other community libraries can be used under the exchange system.
- President Ford has recommended spending be held down.

Furthermore, since this meeting the President has recommended more taxes, in the form of a surtax. Also, there is talk of closing another school in Mount Prospect. (Do we have another Central School in the making?)

I believe local government should act for the needs of the people. At one trustee meeting Mayor Telchert was asked if he would vote for a new library if 80 per cent of the people opposed it. He said he would still vote for it. How can the people be served if our village officials won't do what the people want? Furthermore, Mayor Telchert has said he thinks surveys aren't of much value, and referendums are a waste of the taxpayers money. Without these tools how can any public official serve the people?

It will be interesting to see if the board of trustees will adjust their views on the Central School site now that the consultants, which the board hired, have made their recommendations known. Barton-Aschman Associates propose that

Thanking Barb

If I wait to find stationery and typewriter, I'll probably not "get around" to writing this letter and I do want you to know how helpful your switchboard operator was the afternoon of Oct. 1. I asked her name and she told me "Barb Dickinson."

I could remember reading in The Herald about a games place two young men opened. It was so successful they opened a second place and I could remember they used to advertise in The Herald at times. Your display advertising department could not help me, but your Barb Dickinson said she knew it was still there, on Algonquin near the Pizza Hut. The Pizza Hut was able to give me their exact name, "Just Games."

So, thanks to Paddock's extremely pleasant and helpful Barb Dickinson, our little boy will be able to have his birthday party at "Just Games" after all.

They praise park district

On Wednesday, Oct. 9, the Mount Prospect Garden Club had a horticultural show at the Community Center in which club members and children of School Dist. 57 had been asked to participate.

The response of the children and teachers was overwhelming. They filled the clubroom with their entries in the morning, then were brought in by their teachers and parents to view the show in the afternoon.

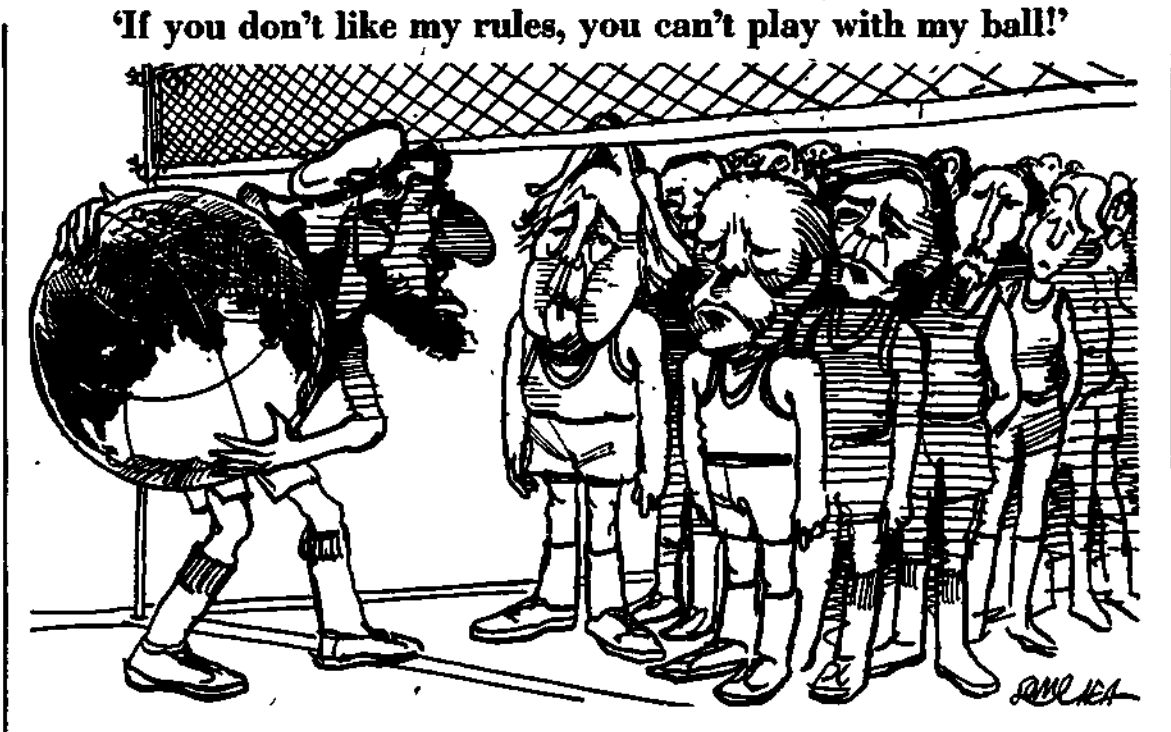

The garden club served cookies, cake, punch and coffee to approximately 450 children and adults.

This would have been an impossibility without the complete cooperation of the staff at the Community Center. They always serve us well at all of our regular meetings, setting up tables, bringing in filled coffee pots, etc., but on this day they made available to us a 10 gallon cooler for the punch, helped us mix it, then made themselves available to us all afternoon. They cleaned up after us to get ready for the next group who would be coming in around 4 p.m.

It seems the only way to really express our appreciation to the park district is in a public "thank you."

Red tape cutback is urged

President Ford's economy program is an alleviation. The urging to us all to cut down on gas, lighting and other energy consumptions is reasonable. However we would like to see some curtailment also on the Senate, House of Representatives, the White House and other government bureaus and their unnecessary expenditures and red-tape procedures. This would give us a renewal of heart and loyalty to our country.

The surtax should be amended to tax the above $20,000-a-year income bracket, not any lower, to level the burden nationwide. As President Ford has proposed it now, it skirts the profits on the monopolies, as you can see on a close study of the plan, and has the economic crisis fall almost completely on the shoulders of the middle-class taxpayers.

'Where's state now?'

As a member of C.O.R.P.S.E. (Citizens of Old McHenry Road Proposing Slaughter Elimination), I am disgusted with the way the state department of transportation is handling our traffic problem. When the members of C.O.R.P.S.E. put up signs on Old McHenry Road asking drivers to please slow down, the state came along and told us the signs had to come down. They said, "The signs are too close to the highway." Now I see a sign was put up on Old McHenry asking voters for a certain candidate in the upcoming election. This sign is even closer to the road than ours were. "Where is the state now?"

Since the state thinks it can do what it wants, I shall exercise my voting power by voting for all the candidates that are running against those who are already in office. I hope other voters will follow suit and do the same. Maybe the state will remember that they were elected to serve for the people and not as they feel like.

'Buy Central School site'

The opportunity has come for the people of Mount Prospect to encourage the village board to move forward and purchase the Central School site for the library. Let us start to move town ahead.

Our library works hard to do a good job with crowded conditions. Our town is not backward and should not want this to continue. Help get the library a new site.

Money is hard pressed in these times, a housewife knows, but she also knows that the services, records, films, tapes, books and pictures, not to mention reference material, are something she could not afford to purchase for her family. The cost of the bonds broken down is a very small amount per day. It is far below the cost of any of the above.

The removal of Central School replaced with the new library perhaps could do more to encourage new business than the many surveys that are being done. Business will then see that we have something to offer. Why come otherwise?

It was the smallest of margins but the biggest of prizes.

By a single point Friday evening the Schaumburg Saxons became the gridiron lords of the Mid-Suburban League. The score was 7-6 over defending Super Bowl champion Hersey and the game was every bit as close as that score, decided finally by an extra-point kick.

But the gritty Saxons, the upstarts of the MSL, knocked off the vaunted Huskies on Hersey's own field, using a simple option offense led by junior quarterback Russ Zonca. The 5-foot-11 180-pound Saxon signalcaller showed the desire of a winner and, in the end, it was his running that made the difference.

Zonca ran inside, he ran outside, he ricocheted off a tremendous number of enemy jerseys and spewed up a lot of dust and turf. Zonca also ran across the goal line to pull his Saxons back into the ball game in the late going and set the stage for the upset verdict.

Schaumburg's tally came three plays into the fourth quarter after they had trailed by a 6-0 count for nearly two full periods and speculation was on the increase about an infallible Hersey defense. It was a 55-yard gallop by Zonca that set up the stalemate and a boot from the veteran toe of Roger River that quickly dissolved it.

The outcome produced several ramifications: Coach Bob Ferguson's outfit will now advance as the circuit's first representative in the state grid playoffs beginning Wednesday.

It also marked the first victory by a Dist. 211 school in the five-year-old Super Bowl and the third straight major sports title, scooped up by them (Conant won last year's basketball playoff and Fremd captured the succeeding baseball crown).

The decision also made it three in a row for 211 this fall, following Palatine's triumph over the golf circuit and Fremd's continuing cross country dominance.

The Schaumburg victory Friday came neither swiftly nor overpoweringly. Although there was plenty of running room for both clubs, it was the defenses that ruled the gridiron.

Hersey went on a march to open the contest that consumed over half the field in 10 plays down to the enemy 16. Ken Jaffke and Bob Jones subsequently broke through to nail hard-nosed Huskie halfback Jeff Forster for an eight-yard loss and move them out of field goal range.

So Hersey went for the TD and Mike Marx intercepted a Scott Topczewski pass on fourth down to snuff out the threat.

The visitors had even less success on offense and Hersey was back in control following a punt at their own 30 with the first period coming to a close.

This time Topczewski spiced the running of Forster with passes to Chip Nowak and Chris Vivona in a crisp nine-play march to paydirt. The capper was a beautifully executed aerial from the junior Huskie quarterback that caught Dave Carey on the run in the left corner of the end zone from 13 yards out.

The following extra point kick attempt was just a bit wide to the right but it seemed hardly significant at the time. Hersey was having little difficulty moving the ball.

After trading punts, with the first half closing out, Schaumburg moved into high gear offensively, too. A pass from Zonca to Tom Martino and first down scampers by both of them were instrumental in a 49-yard drive penetrating to the Hersey 16.

The threat ended there, however, one yard shy of a first down and the 6-0 score remained on the board through intermission.

In the third stanza the guests stalled after three plays and kicked. Hersey came back with another long drive, this one eating up 61 yards in a dozen plays down to the Schaumburg three. The Huskies had chalked up a first down at the 12 on Topczewski's 18-yard fling to Carey but they moved only nine more yards on the next four tries and turned control back to the Saxons.

Thus began a 97-yard thrust to the Huskie end zone. Zonca picked up five on a broken play and two more up to the ten before taking off on his 55-yard jaunt down the right sidelines. He was finally pulled down from behind by Roger Urban at the host's 35-yard stripe.

Hersey held firm on the next three plays, but on fourth down Zonca resorted to the quarterback draw, and with great second effort he picked up the needed seven yards for a new set of downs. Two subsequent pitchouts closed the period with the ball resting at the Hersey 15.

To open the fourth quarter it was first Mike Christy lugging for four, then Scott Mielke plowing six more yards, and then Zonca sprinting off to the right sidelines

Pairings were announced Saturday night by the IHSA.

First round games will get underway Wednesday, with those winners meeting in quarterfinal games next Saturday. Semifinals will be held Nov. 16 with finals in all five classes scheduled for Illinois State University in Normal Nov. 22-23.

Other Class 5A pairings find Niles West (7-1) at Willowbrook (7-2), Glenbrook North (8-0) at Evanston (8-1), Hillcrest (8-0) at Homewood-Flossmoor (8-1), Gordon Tech (9-0) at Hinsdale Central (7-2), Quincy (6-1) at East St. Louis (9-0), and Glenbard West (8-1) at Naperville (8-1).

Schaumburg won the Mid-Suburban title with a 7-6 victory over Hersey Friday evening. St. Viator was voted the champion of the East Suburban Catholic Conference after finishing in a deadlock for the crown.

Additional details on the playoff games involving Schaumburg and St. Viator will appear in Tuesday and Wednesday sports.

Bloom high School rules the state's cross country field after the Trojans defeated York and Fremd in the Illinois state meet held in Peoria Saturday.

In one of the closest finishes in state meet history, Bloom garnered 91 points, three-time defending champion York had 96, and pre-meet favorite Fremd collected 106. The last time the championship runoff was as close was in the 1967 when Arlington edged Proviso West by a single point.

Bloom's title hopes had been pinned on the performance of coach Don Slota's tight-running pack, and the Trojan harriers didn't buckle under the pressure as they produced a 25-second split. With Leo Lenting and Dave Carrizales finishing fourth and eighth in the team ranks, Bloom ripped Joe Newton's York Dukies, who were trying for their seventh cross country title since 1962.

The individual winner was Proviso West's Tom Marino, a senior who traversed the flat three-mile course in 14:14.3, 24 seconds off the course record held by Craig Virgil. York's Ron Craker was second, six seconds behind, and Dan Glickrist of Rockford East was third. Both Craker and Glickrist are juniors.

Maine West's Joe Paul ran 18th overall in 14:48 and Conant's Mark Kaufman came home 86th in 15:16.

Fourth place in the team standings went to Proviso West (141), just ahead of fifth-place DeKalb (155) and well in front of sixth-place Maine East (266).

Bloom and Fremd had each come into the meet undefeated in 1974 and each had hopes of knocking off perennial power York. Bloom's harriers were the gritty bunch that came away with the win.

"If you look at the results you can see that it was there for us but we didn't take it," said Fremd coach Sam Mowley. "Bloom and York ran as well as they could, but we still could have won it. Only one of our boys ran as well as he could have — and that was the soph-gained his feet immediately and finished 13th behind Hormann, but Kleinow was passed by in the confusion and came in 76th. Bloom's harriers won the state meet at Detweiler Park Saturday and Fremd was third. (Photo by Al Messerschmidt)

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Joe Gliwa gathered his Hersey Huskies around him in the lockerroom, in that dull span of time after a losing football game, when nothing much has really sunk in and thinking about the football game that has just ended is the last thing anybody wants to do.

Joe Gliwa gathered his team around him and talked to them in his hoarse drill instructor cadence that was faintly incongruous used on this exhausted and strangely childlike group of young men.

"I want everybody up here in front," Gliwa shouted. "I want to talk to all of you."

The faces of Hersey's football team were smeared with lamp-black, to cut the glare of the lights and mud, and looks of disappointment that varied in intensity depending on how much the player had had to do with the outcome.

Some had played better than others, some had not set foot on the field in anger all night. Still others had taken out their frustrations after the game by jostling the celebrant Schaumburg fans as they trespassed victoriously on Hersey's field.

Individually they expressed their disgust for themselves, but as a team they had lost, to Schaumburg, in the Super Bowl, 7-6.

"I want everybody to get their heads up," Gliwa was saying. "Everybody sit up here where I can see you. If you can win with us then you can lose with us, too."

Gliwa made a motion with his hands, like calling time out. "That's what the essence of a team is. Sticking together. Don't be a good loser though. Always, always be a sore loser."

"Because if you're a sore loser then you won't become a champion. You won't become a champion about losing and you won't become a champion in life."

That is one of the things that strikes you about Gliwa. All that he teaches has a purpose beyond the scope of a football season. Gliwa realizes he can give his teams something beyond the tenuous and fleeting thrill of a championship.

"We only lost this game by a point," Gliwa continued. "But a point is as big as a mile. You've been beaten but there are a lot of things you can be proud of."

"I've had some of you here for four years and I hope you've learned something in that time."

"I want all of you to know that if you ever need anything you can always come back here and we'll help you. We care about each and every one of you and you can count on us."

and angling in at the corner to score from five yards out.

With the clock stopped at 11:06, Biver came in and did his thing, splitting the uprights and propelling the Saxons to their eighth triumph in nine games this fall.

On three later occasions in the final quarter Hersey came into control of the ball only to see their offense sputter out. A fumble recovery by Scott Scholz discouraged one of those attacks and a penalty and two incomplete passes prompted a punting situation on the third effort.

Hersey's defense had dug in to regain possession quickly the first two times but after yielding back to Schaumburg a third time the hosts were left with no time outs and Zonca and company simply ran out the clock.

Long wait for ace

POCONO MANOR, Pa. (UPI) — Charlie Maher, retired teletype operator for United Press International, scored his first hole-in-one after 54 years of golf on the 202-yard 13th hole of Pocomo Manor's West Course Sept. 4, 1974. It was only the second ace ever recorded on that hole.

Then for a moment Gliwa shifted to the less inspirational chores of coaching.

"Now I'll be here tomorrow morning and I want you to come in and return your equipment. I'd appreciate it if we wouldn't have any theft because it's a pain in the neck to go around and try to track down missing equipment."

"I know a lot of you are going out for sports this winter. You'll be starting Monday and some of you may start tomorrow. Try to remember some of the things we've taught you here."

"There'll be an awards banquet and I'd like all of you to come and pick up your awards."

Then for a moment Gliwa was silent. A manager standing behind him quietly tore down a long paper banner proclaiming Hersey superiority.

"I can't think of anything else to say. But before any of you walk out that door tonight I want everyone to stop by the office and shake hands. I'm proud of every one of you. I've got nothing left to say except to shake hands."

"I'll be seeing all of you gentlemen later."

'We've worked so hard for this'

by ART MUGALIAN

Bob Ferguson calmly and patiently explained how and why his Schaumburg Saxons became the 1974 Mid-Suburban League Super Bowl champions Friday night at Hersey. A bevy of excited reporters scribbled down every word the Saxon coach spoke.

Then the ordinarily mild-mannered and subdued Ferguson made his triumphant entrance onto the Schaumburg team bus, already loaded to the brim with wildly exuberant Saxons who were just beginning to realize that they indeed would be returning home with the Super Bowl trophy.

At that point the Saxon coach let go all his pent-up emotions.

"I guess we made believers out of them!" Ferguson exclaimed and his players echoed the chant that comes from all winners.

"We're number one!" they chorused over and over.

And, of course, the Schaumburg Saxons are No. 1 following their 7-6 victory over the Hersey Huskies in a performance that would make believers out of the most cynical fan.

"It's gonna be another shower for you, coach!" yelled Ferguson's happy heroes when the coach finally reached the bus.

Ferguson's stoic demeanor and quiet confidence gave way in the end to sincere joy.

"I feel really elated," the coach said before boarding the team bus for the trip back to Schaumburg and who knows how many victory parties. "We've worked so hard for this — the principals, the athletic director, the whole coaching staff, everybody. Now we've got it!"

The Saxons won and they will advance to the state's first gridiron playoffs because they played the typical hardnosed Schaumburg football game. A Saxon victory wouldn't be complete without at least one heartstopping run by junior quarterback Russ Zonca and a rousing goal line stand by the Schaumburg defenders.

But the man of the hour was Roger Biver, whose sure-footed extra-point kick provided Schaumburg's winning margin.

"You're the hero," someone suggested to Biver, and the long-haired kicker just grinned and agreed.

"I know, it feels great," Biver shouted.

What was Roger thinking when he booted the winning point with 11:06 left in the game? Probably his mind was a blank.

"I was leaving it up to the Lord," said Biver, whose kick split the uprights as Ron Geels held.

For Zonca, the triple option quarterback who gained 113 yards on the ground Friday, the second half proved to be the big one.

"The coach told me at halftime to get off my butt," said the junior signalcaller, who responded with the key plays that helped wipe out Hersey's 6-0 halftime lead.

"Zonca looked terribly slow in the first half," said Ferguson. "But we made some adjustments in the second half. And the big play was a Texas-right option. He just broke it, he made that fake and he went."

Zonca followed his blockers and raced 55 yards down the right sideline, finally shoved out of bounds by Hersey's Roger Urban at the Huskie 36.

"The whole right side of the line blocked great," said Zonca. "And (Scott) Mielke threw a good block, too."

Mielke, who contributed 32 yards rushing, picked up a couple of key first downs late in the game when Schaumburg was trying to kill the clock.

Fullback Tom Martino managed 28 yards on the ground, but the senior letterman made his major contribution on defense, where he and his teammates have sparked all season.

"Boy, we were expecting them to pass more than they did," Martino said.

It was Martino who, along with Scott Scholz and Bob Viviano, halted Hersey fullback Jeff Forster on a fourth-down pitchout at the Saxon three-yard line. Hersey passed up a field goal attempt, electing to go to their top ground gainer instead, and Schaumburg wrapped him up less than a yard short of the first down.

"That was the turning point right there," said Ferguson.

The Saxons then began their 83-yard drive for the winning touchdown, scored appropriately by Zonca on a five-yard burst.

It was left to the Schaumburg defense to protect the slim one-point edge. And they did it with relish. Bob Jones baited a pass into the face of Hersey quarterback Scott Topczewski. Jeff Boji broke through and nailed Jeff Forster on an important third-down draw play. And with 4:10 left in the game, the rugged Saxon front line forced a Forster fumble and Scholz came up with the ball for Schaumburg.

Ferguson was glad to see the Huskies run the ball as much as they did, especially since the Saxon coach felt his boys might be vulnerable to the air attack.

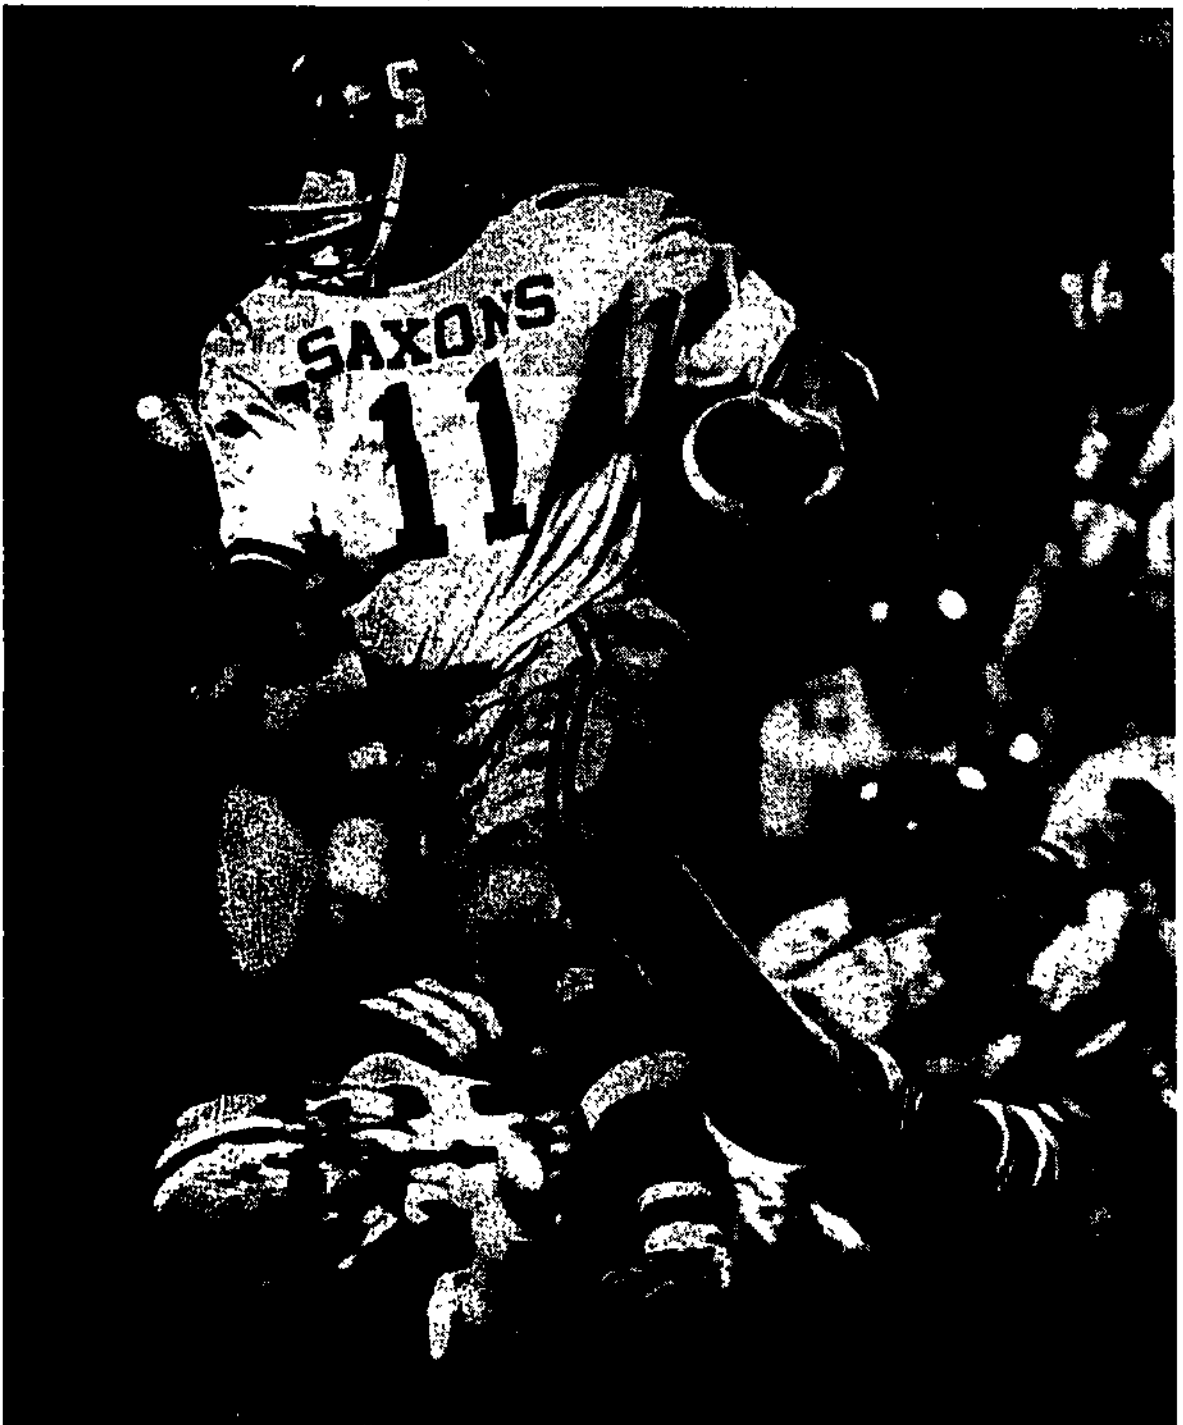

"We were hoping they would run," said Ferguson. "We're tough against the run — we bend but we always make the big play."

The Saxons have relied on the big play all season, on both offense and defense, and their Super Bowl victory was no exception.

"We're number one!" the Saxons continued to shout as the team bus rolled onto the street.

Ferguson and his champions enjoyed their bus ride home.

RENEWING THE OPTION. Schaumburg quarterback Russ Zonca took matters into his own capable hands Friday night in the Super Bowl at Hersey, running the quarterback option keeper to perfection. Following several key blocks, the junior signalcaller broke the game

open with a 55-yard scamper late in the third quarter and he put Schaumburg on the scoreboard a moment later with a five-yard run. Roger Biver gave the Saxons the winning margin when his extra-point kick made the score 7-6. (Photo by Dave Tonge)

Reserves have fun in St. Viator's crushing 61-0 win

by MIKE KLEIN
They've found another quarterback at St. Viator. His name is Jim Thompson. Write that down some place. He's golden. You'll watch Thompson next year, running the Lions up and down these area football stadiums. Probably throwing, too.

And if you preferred Catholic football to the Mid-Suburban League Super Bowl last Friday evening, there was young Thompson previewing his assets. He's a 5-foot-11, 165-pound junior who's learned how to quarterback this season as Bobby Walsh's understudy. On Friday at Rolling Meadows, Walsh and the Lions romped to a 26-0 halftime lead over St. Joseph. That enabled Walsh to hand Thompson the ball and say, "Here kid, go have some fun."

Maybe those weren't the exact words, but Thompson and his second, string backfield of Bill Deal, Mark Bonucchi and Tom Joyce kept the ball moving until Viator had a 61-0 triumph. Thompson caught one touchdown pass in the second period from Walsh. It was a 19-yarder that gave Viator a 20-0 lead. He really got moving after the break. Thompson threw for two scores, directed Viator to four touchdowns and led the Lions with 91 yards rushing on just eight carries. Thompson has been there before. He stepped in at Carmel and moved the Lions to four last period touchdowns in a 54-0 romp. He's caught a few Walsh passes and thrown a couple throughout Viator's 8-1 season.

But Thompson proved Viator has quarterback depth, which could be important in IHSA Class 5A playoffs if the Lions get a bid. At this writing, East Suburban Catholic coaches hadn't voted their conference champion, the choices will be between Viator, St. Francis deSales and Holy Cross.

The IHSA was set to determine final playoff alignments late Sunday or early Monday. Games begin on Wednesday at eight sites.

The huge victory over St. Joseph marked the most points Viator has scored this season. They set the mark when Thompson scored on a 24-yard run with less than one minute remaining. It was the Lions' fourth TD in the last period.

St. Joe's Chargers more or less quit and certainly made the task easier for Viator which finished 6-1 in ESCC games, the only loss in overtime to deSales.

Priding themselves on defense, the Chargers were pretty well picked apart at halftime. In the final analysis, Viator rolled up more yards, 433-60; first downs, 20-3; had 274 yards rushing and held the Chargers to minus six yards rushing.

That ominous St. Joseph rushing stat includes 10 plays which lost 59 yards. Five were quarterback sacks that averaged nine yards lost per play. Mark Selvig, Rich Kalser, Scott Zetek and John Henderson were credited with quarterback dumps.

The Lions' only third quarter points, for a 33-0 lead, came on Mark Michuda's 37-yard pass interception touchdown. St. Joe quarterback Tom Maher pitched to halfback Dennis Moran. He was looking for a return pass when Michuda stepped in front and stole the ball.

The other eight touchdowns all came across by Viator's offense. Mark Campana kicked seven extra points in eight tries.

Under former Viator coach Sal Nuccio, St. Joseph had given just 109 points before Friday evening. That included a 30-point shutout loss to Holy Cross. St. Francis deSales needed a kick rumbuck to edge them, 13-12, four weeks ago.

Nuccio's defense came out tough in the opening quarter. Viator couldn't manage a first down either of its first two possessions. They did on the third and also scored with 35 seconds left in the period.

Joe Litwin plunged two yards after Walsh's 22-yard left sweep had given Viator first and goal. The onslaught had begun.

Selvig dropped Maher for a 10-yard loss trying to pass, setting up a fourth and 20 for St. Joseph. Viator went 46 yards in six plays, helped by a holding penalty, and John Breen scored from six yards. The Lions led, 14-0.

When Maher fumbled and Zetek recovered, the Lions were in business three plays later. Litwin clicked off three rushes for 24 yards before Walsh passed 19 yards to Thompson for a 20-0 lead.

They scored again less than two minutes later when Walsh rifled 30 and 35-omere, Filosa." John Filosa, Fremd's No. 3 runner most of the season, finished first among the Vikings in 11th place overall. He was the first sophomore to finish.

Behind him were teammates Will Fieldhouse (21st), Paul Kinyon (24th), Jim Galls (45th), and Dave Scott (73rd). Other Vikings were Kevin Richardson (150th) and Dan Tischler (213th).

"Filosa ran exactly as we had projected him — 14:40," said Menely. "But every other man was at least 10 seconds behind what he should have run. Galls ran pretty well, but Tischler just had the sophomore jitters."

"Twenty guys passed our fifth man in the last 30 or 40 yards," the Fremd coach continued. "With 220 yards to go, we would have won with about 60 points. 'We've had a super season,' Menely said, 'but it leaves a bitter taste in the mouth losing to a couple teams that we knew we could have beaten. If any one of our four boys had run five or 10 seconds faster, we would have taken it.'

"We've run good races all year," Menely concluded. "We ran one down race and this was it. Our kids felt they were ready, but they thought too much during the race. They were thinking about where they were and where each other was. They were too concerned about that stuff during the race."

"They just didn't go out and run like they should have," the Fremd coach said. "It's not a very good feeling to lose," Menely added. "The kids are taking it pretty hard."

The Fire log

by Sparky O'Leary

WFL needs realistic goals

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the World.

And in a little while, I might even see the end.

World Football League. An interesting concept, but then again, so are showers. I take one every week, whether I need it or not.

By my own count, this is our ninth Monday morning together. During that span, the local WFL Chicago Fire has not won a single football endeavor.

This has caused me to dream quite a lot. Last week, you might remember, I dreamed that Fire owner Tom Origer would ascend into the WFL commissioner's throne.

So whaddya know, on Tuesday a great facelift had World founder Gary Davidson stepping aside as commissioner. Origer was named to the league's new six-owner executive committee.

This is a major step forward for the stumbling World which still must present the public with a cohesive, believable product.

What will save the World?

Maybe nothing if Pete Rozelle continues adding franchises to the already unbalanced National Football League.

Last Thursday, the NFL announced new teams for Tampa, Fla., and Seattle, Wash. They'll begin losing in 1976 with placement of two additional clubs possible for that season or 1977.

It's an obvious game plan. Denying any ideas of a WFL-NFL merger, the older league wants to gobble up remaining untouched markets before its financially bereaved competitor sends out letters of application.

At last Tuesday's WFL summit, Memphis Southmen owner John Bassett, no pauper in a World of paupers, indicated there will be 10-to-14 teams next year. Origer likes eight-to-10.

But if expansion happens, under growth chairman Davidson, where can the league plant roots?

Fire coach Jim Spavital says Canada could support a couple WFL types, one in British Columbia, the other in Toronto.

Bassett's Memphis franchise began as the Toronto Northmen but moved south when Canadian legislators flexed their muscles, telling the WFL to take its little field and run over the border.

The word is they've reconsidered. It seems many Canadian Football League stars also preferred the little World field. Call it dilution politics.

American markets? Yeah, there's still some available. You could go into Phoenix or Tulsa. And how about Milwaukee which gets its two or three Packer games but little else?

I can see it already . . . let's have a big Chicago Fire welcome for our visitors, the Milwaukee Stein.

Another Spavital idea for which I take no credit: He thinks Wiffle could make a killing in Columbus, Ohio. If the Big Ten ever opens its stadiums to professional football.

You'll remember the Bears made some queries into using Northwestern's Dyche Stadium a few years back. They were rebuffed.

But playing in Columbus could mean you're the second best team in town behind Ohio State. And perhaps third when Michigan pops in for a visit.

I disdain any 1975 WFL expansion. What's wrong with 10 well financed, equally competitive teams in two divisions? Take six for your playoffs, not the ridiculous figure of eight.

The WFL must present its public with a believable product. That is your primary consideration in every move.

So how can one side of the mouth say money is tight while the other blabbers expansion? That's sorta like adding milk to your jello mix, then muttering at the result.

Last week's restructuring is great. The WFL surpassed the stage of possible "Rozelle Rule," one guy making all decisions.

Progress is possible. But should it overstep realistic goals, the glory of the World will end in a flurry of debt.

There won't be any third chance. The WFL knows it and so does Rozelle. He couldn't be happier.

Bears delight the pessimists in 17-0 loss to Minnesota

The difference between an optimist and a pessimist is often very slight.

The optimist, for instance, would say that the Chicago Bears played a good first half against the Minnesota Vikings in Soldier Field Sunday.

The pessimist would shrug and say that even though the Bears played decently in the first half, they more than made up for it in the second half.

(The stoic would say, "What of it?")

The gut feelings of all Bear fans underwent a severe transformation Sunday as optimism faded into pessimism and finally gave way to outright indifference. Through the long and gloomy afternoon the Bears demonstrated how not to play the game of football, losing 17-0.

All the optimists in the crowd cheered when Carl Garrett, the renegade running back for Chicago, gained big yardage by wriggling through holes in the Minnesota line. Then the optimists and Garrett were floored when Carl left the game permanently with a severe ankle injury.

Next, after failing to hit favored receiver Charlie Wade on a number of pass patterns, Bear quarterback Gary Huff decided to throw to Jim Pague, the tight end from Ohio State. It was just last week that Buckeye coach Woody Hayes suggested that Pague would make a dandy receiver. It never hurts to listen to Woody, but the Bears didn't go to Pague again.

At halftime, it seemed to be only a matter of time before the Bears would break loose. Abe's animal defense was bending but not buckling. Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton had lost his passing touch, and after the Bears had stopped Minnesota on the four-yard line, the Vikes had to settle for a field goal from Fred Cox. The three-pointer was Minnesota's entire first-half attack.

It looked like the defense was going to actually hand the game ball to the offense for the Bears. Fans were just adding back into their seats when Chicago's Craig Clemens intercepted a Tarkenton pass and returned it to the Minnesota 35 at the beginning of the third quarter. Then Ken Grandberry, playing in place of Garrett, ran for a first down.

At that point, the optimists lost all their credibility.

On fourth down, Mike Roder came in to try a game-tying 32-yard field goal, but the snap was slightly off-target and Norm Hodgins had to run, needless to say without any success.

Viking runners Dave Osborn and Chuck Foreman proceeded to make mince meat out of the Bear defensive line and eventually Tarkenton located deep threat John Gilliam — where else but deep? — on a 35-yard touchdown pass that found Allen Ellis napping.

Then Grandberry fumbled a screen pass when Wally Hilgenberg blasted him from the side, and Viking Jeff Sleman scooped up the fumble. On fourth and goal from the four, moments later, Viking coach Bud Grant disdained the field goal and Tarkenton added injury to insult by zipping a TD pass to Stu Voigt.

If any optimists remained in the stands following that short Minnesota scoring drive, they were given the rudest shock imaginable a moment later. Huff fumbled a snap from center and when he rolled over on the ball, a heavy member of the Viking line came to rest squarely on Gary's ankle.

Out comes Huff, in goes Bobby Douglass, and the pessimists got the booing apparatus into working order.

Poor Bobby, he never had a chance. The scene was disgusting and pitiable at the same time. The petos was dripping like the rain. Douglass threw 11 passes before he finally completed one, although several probably should have been caught.

And Douglass was just getting warmed up when the game mercifully came to an end.

The optimist would say that the Bears might have scored if Douglass had one more crack at it.

The pessimist would say, "Thank God the game is over!"

Harper runners in 4th at Skyway league meet

Oakton and Triton repeated as co-champions in the Skyway Conference cross country meet Friday in River Grove as Harper, a 1973 co-champion, fell to fourth place.

The meet marked the final cross country competition for Harper and Triton in the Skyway Conference. Both schools will transfer to the MAC junior college conference next year.

For the Harper Hawks, it was the first time in five years that they failed to win or share the harrier title in the Skyway. Coach Bob Nolan's crew captured fourth behind Waubones, as the Hawks' best runner, freshman Dennis Kimmet, dropped to 17th place.

"Kimmet had stomach cramps," said Nolan. "He was up there at the mile but his stomach started bothering him and he had trouble finishing."

Kimmet raced the five-mile course in 23:12, behind teammates Rick Reithal and Bob Borucki. Reithal was 15th in 29:05 and Borucki was right behind in 18th in a time of 29:11.

Harper's remaining harriers were Phil Flore 18th (29:37), Dennis Fagan 23rd (30:26), Rick Fortman 25th (31:24), and Keith Jauch 28th (32:59).

"We didn't do too well, partly because Kimmet wasn't running up to par," said Nolan. But Triton and Oakton ran very well. Both teams were really up for the meet, figuring they had a chance to win it. Plus, it's Triton's home course and Oakton has run on it a few times, too.

"I think maybe our kids let down a little after the Region meet," Nolan allowed. "And that was also the first time our kids had run on the course. There were a few tough hills."

Nolan and Kimmet will leave for Eugene, Ore. this week where Kimmet will compete in the junior college nationals. The Harper freshman qualified for the race with an eighth-place showing in the Region IV meet in Palestine last week.

Warriors fail to get 'untracked' in 10-0 reversal at Maine South

by MIKE KLEIN

The pass pattern was a simple half-back release to the right side, then a curl into the empty zone between Maine South's linebackers and defensive secondary.

Bill Makuch ran the pattern and found that open spot. Maine West quarterback Terry Quinn saw his receiver, let the ball fly and then watched as Makuch dropped an easy reception.

Beautiful pattern, no gain. That's how it didn't work early in the second period and most of Saturday afternoon for the Warriors on South's Wilson Field.

Stymied by bores for hands and very poor offensive execution, the Warriors had no measure of consistency so they were shut out, 10-0. Fumbles, interceptions, penalties . . . they all hurt.

"Four times we set up screens and had three people out front of the ballcarrier to block one man but couldn't hold the ball," lamented West head coach Jim Morel. "We just had the dumps."

So the dream that was a little flighty at best, that of sharing the Central Suburban South title, came crashing down upon the Warriors who played flat, listless football. Incidentally, so did the winners.

Gaydon Brandt's 20-yard first quarter field goal, after West's Norb Ploszaj fumbled, stood as the only points until Bob Schmidt's Hawks worked for a last period touchdown. On fourth and goal, Raon Pankau tossed a nine-yard TD strike to Rick Hader. Ploszaj leaped but couldn't deflect the ball.

Victory would have been academic because Deerfield won the CSL South by shutting out Niles North, 25-0, and will begin IHSA Class 5A playoffs on Wednesday.

Niles West, a 20-0 winner over Niles East this weekend, equalled Deerfield's 4-1 league mark but lost to the CSL South champs.

For Maine West's Warriors, well, they've got a 3-2 record and three consecutive second place finishes. So you can say they're almost good enough to win, but not quite.

All of which leaves Morel very strung out and frustrated. "We're 10-3 in league games these last three years," he said. "That's an almost record. You know, we should really be 12-3. We're just two games away from sharing a couple conference championships. Some people might be happy with that record."

He measured the next statement, said the Warriors had choked and then re-worked that thought. "I don't really know whether we choked or everyone was flat," he said. "Maybe that's it. They were flat. We were flat."

"It was just a question of Mickey Mousing around the field. They didn't do too much either," Morel added. "Here's our biggest logical rival and I'm sure it's the same for them. But at the end, both teams just milled around."

"You can't knock kids. They tried but we just couldn't get untracked."

The two hours these teams leaned against each other . . . you can't call what they did hitting . . . came off as nothing more than totally emotionless football.

Neither team was aided by officials who seemed eager to throw their fickle flag of fate. They prescribed 75 penalty yards before halftime, taking away Makuch's touchdown plus a 52-yard pass completion for South's Hawks.

"Everybody had the shakes and jitters in the second half," said Morel. "They were afraid to hit and tackle." And hardly anyone did for either club as South, like West, finished at 3-2 in league games.

If you're inclined toward the big play, then Makuch's nullified touchdown run probably killed the Warriors who sustained just 150 yards total offense on 81 rushing and 69 passing.

After Brandt made it 3-0, Makuch used a couple blocks to find open territory and raced the last 50 yards untouched for an apparent 6-3 Warrior lead.

But the flag had been thrown against Bob Smith at West's 46-yard line, scratching the touchdown and giving the Warriors possession on their 31.

From that point, it went downhill. West lost three-of-six fumbles. Quinn suffered three interceptions by Randy Cronier during a 7-of-18 passing day in which many were dropped, especially those short screens to either side.

Makuch, Bob Zuccarini and Ploszaj each intercepted one pass and Steve Zuccarini recovered one fumble. But these turnovers meant nothing because the offense couldn't move.

West's deepest penetration was to South's 34-yard line where Brad Bonni-vier fumbled after taking a 17-yard pass from Quinn, that late in the game.

Equally confused, the Hawks never moved until consuming five minutes with 12 plays to open the last period. That's when Pankau found Hader for the nine-yard touchdown pass.

West came back to pick up five of its eight first downs during the final minutes but never threatened South's goal line.

As Morel noted, when the clock ran down, everyone milled around. It seemed their minds were somewhere else, certainly not on football.

Hoffman Estates holds off Arlington to take gym title

by PAUL LOGAN

Hoffman Estates' gymnastics team — only in its second year of existence — responded under pressure like an old, established school.

And, ironically, the Hawks of Coach Trude Smith did this responding against the oldest high school in the Herald area.

Hoffman — labeled the team to beat in the girls' Mid-Suburban Conference meet Saturday at Elk Grove — held off the Cardinals of Coach Joanna Murdoch to win the school's first team title.

The Hawks finished with 178.31 points to Arlington's 175.01 in an eight-event test that saw both schools within a couple of points of each other throughout the morning and afternoon sessions.

Hoffman was led by Lorrie O'Toole and Linda Buddenbaum. O'Toole was the only girl on the championship team to finish first twice along with a fourth. O'Toole had a brilliant 8.60 in beginning floor exercise and took the other first in beginning vaulting (8.93).

Lorrie was fourth in intermediate balance beam (8.30). Medals were achieved for all those finishing in the top five both in the individual events and the all-around.

Buddenbaum finished second in the all-around for intermediates with a four-event total of 30.40. Winning the all-around title was Mary Tompkins of Conant with a sparkling 31.71 score.

yard passes to Pat Bucaro, the last for six points and a 28-0 halftime lead.

Passes from Moran to Scott Mlady, 25 yards, and Maher to Moran, 16 yards, gave St. Joseph its initial first downs just before the break.

Mlchuda's interception made it 33-0 after Campana's kick. Thompson did the rest.

He ran 24 yards down to St. Joe's eight late in the third period, then opened the last quarter with a six-yard scoring pass to Bucaro. Thompson's 17-yard pass to Tom Joyce set up Bill Deal's 22-yard scoring run that made it 47-0.

Viator's 54th point was Campana's extra point kick after Mark Bonucchi popped in from one yard out. The key downs on that nine-play drive were Thompson passes of 28 yards to Deal and 16 yards to Jim Kane.

When the Lions regained possession four plays later, they were 66 yards from a ninth touchdown. It came easily. Deal ran nine yards and Bonucchi 10 before Thompson got 21 rushing. Then Bonucchi got 20, reaching St. Joe's 24.

Nobody attempted to stop the clock which had worked down to one minute when Thompson headed left, cut across midfield and left the Chargers in his wake. Touchdown, 61-0. The kid's going to be quite a quarterback.

Hawks stumble before state's top-ranked team

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

The best junior college football team in the state of Illinois, Joliet's Wolves, swept through Harper Saturday afternoon making converts and enemies and slapping the Hawks around, 34-27.

Harper accomplished one of the goals they had set before the game, slamming the door on Joliet's rushing game, but the Wolves proved their versatility and superiority by breaking the game with their previously questionable passing attack.

"Our problem in the early part of the game," Joliet coach Jerry Yost said, "was very poor play selection. We were trying to run against that defense and it was like going into a brick wall."

"Harper had their defensive backs and linebackers pulled in tight against the run so we had to loosen them up by throwing on first and second down."

"Harper beat themselves by gambling and the gamble didn't pay off."

In a game where Harper appeared more psyched up, Joliet more confident, the Hawks received a big break very early when Joliet's quarterback, Tom Moore, fumbled to Harper's Mike Amundson. Given the ball on Joliet's 17, Harper went to work only to give the ball back on a fumble two plays later.

Harper stacked up Joliet's running series and then got the ball back. Harper started to move again only to have a 43-yard field goal attempt go wide.

The next time Harper had the ball, in dandy field position at the Joliet 24 after a Wolf punt regressed two yards, Gary Mueller hit Rich Hoevel as wide open he seemed momentarily confused about his surroundings. Hoevel regained his sense of direction and went in for Harper's first touchdown.

The Wolves came back immediately. Kevin Johnson scored on a 14-yard run that was set up by Moore's 48-yard pass to John Earnest. Then Jim Vincent rolled in from the four yard line after Joliet blocked a Harper punt.

The half ended with Harper moving the ball again. Mueller completed passes to Geoff Bacon and Frank Bavaro but the drive ended when Amundson fumbled to Joliet.

"That was the fumble that really hurt," Ellasik said. "The guy who caused the fumble was the last man between the running back and the endzone. We had them on their heels and scoring just before the half ended would have given us a big psychological lift."

Joliet scored three times in the third quarter and started to show signs of putting the game out of reach. They took a 28-7 lead on touchdowns of one yard running by Vincent and 10 yards passing from Moore to Mark Beisnig.

Bob Andreas came in to replace a shaken up Mueller for one play and made his time on the field count as he threw a 53-yard touchdown pass to Bavaro. Harper was starting to feel their oats just a little but Joliet cut them down instantly when Rick Stanford broke a draw play on the first play from scrimmage and went 70 yards for the touchdown.

"That Stanford kid will be all-state," Ellasik said. "If Kimbrough wasn't around he might be considered the best offensive player in the state."

Kimbrough added to his stature by catching five passes for 80 yards, the last two for Harper's last two touchdowns of the game.

"Their coach did something to us there at the end of the game that I am going to remember," Ellasik said. "With that lead they had they were throwing the ball instead of trying to kill the clock. He wasn't satisfied with winning the game and wanted to embarrass our kids."

"But it worked against him because we got the ball back twice and scored two touchdowns so this game won't look as impressive in the pools as he'd like it to."

"I'll remember this some day when the situations are reversed and I have the material to run up the score on him."

Hospital cost could rise by $2 million

by JOE FRANZ

If construction of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove branch of Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital does not begin this month, the cost could increase by $2 million, a hospital spokesman said.

Norman Davis, a Franklin Boulevard consultant, made the observation in view of renewed speculation over whether the hospital is needed.

Comprehensive Health Planning, a local hospital planning agency that must approve hospital plans, reviewed the Franklin Boulevard plans last week. "I think we made a good presentation, but I'm not sure we convinced them a hospital is needed in the area," said Davis.

Approval by the agency is a prerequisite to receiving Blue Cross-Blue Shield coverage.

"Comprehensive Health Planning is operating under the assumption a hospital is not needed," said Davis. "If you take it from that standpoint, I'm not optimistic."

Davis said the contract for the facility, on the east side of Schoenbeck Road just south of the Wheeling village limits, calls for groundbreaking by Dec. 1. If it is not started the agreement will have to be renegotiated.

"THE CONTRACTOR has informed us that if construction isn't started by then the cost will go up one to one and three-quarters per cent a month," Davis said. "The project will take about 18 months, so that would mean a possible increase of $2 million."

As proposed, the 228-bed facility was expected to cost about $11.3 million, but the delay could push the price over $13 million, Davis said.

Patrick DeMoon, executive director of Franklin Boulevard, recently said he was optimistic Comprehensive Health Planning would approve the plans.

Approval by the agency is uncertain because of a recent report that said there is no need for additional hospitals in Cook County. Robert Devitt of the agency said plans for the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove facility will not be approved unless Franklin Boulevard proves that a need for the hospital exists.

BOTH DeMOON AND Davis said, however, plans for building the hospital will proceed with or without the approval of the agency.

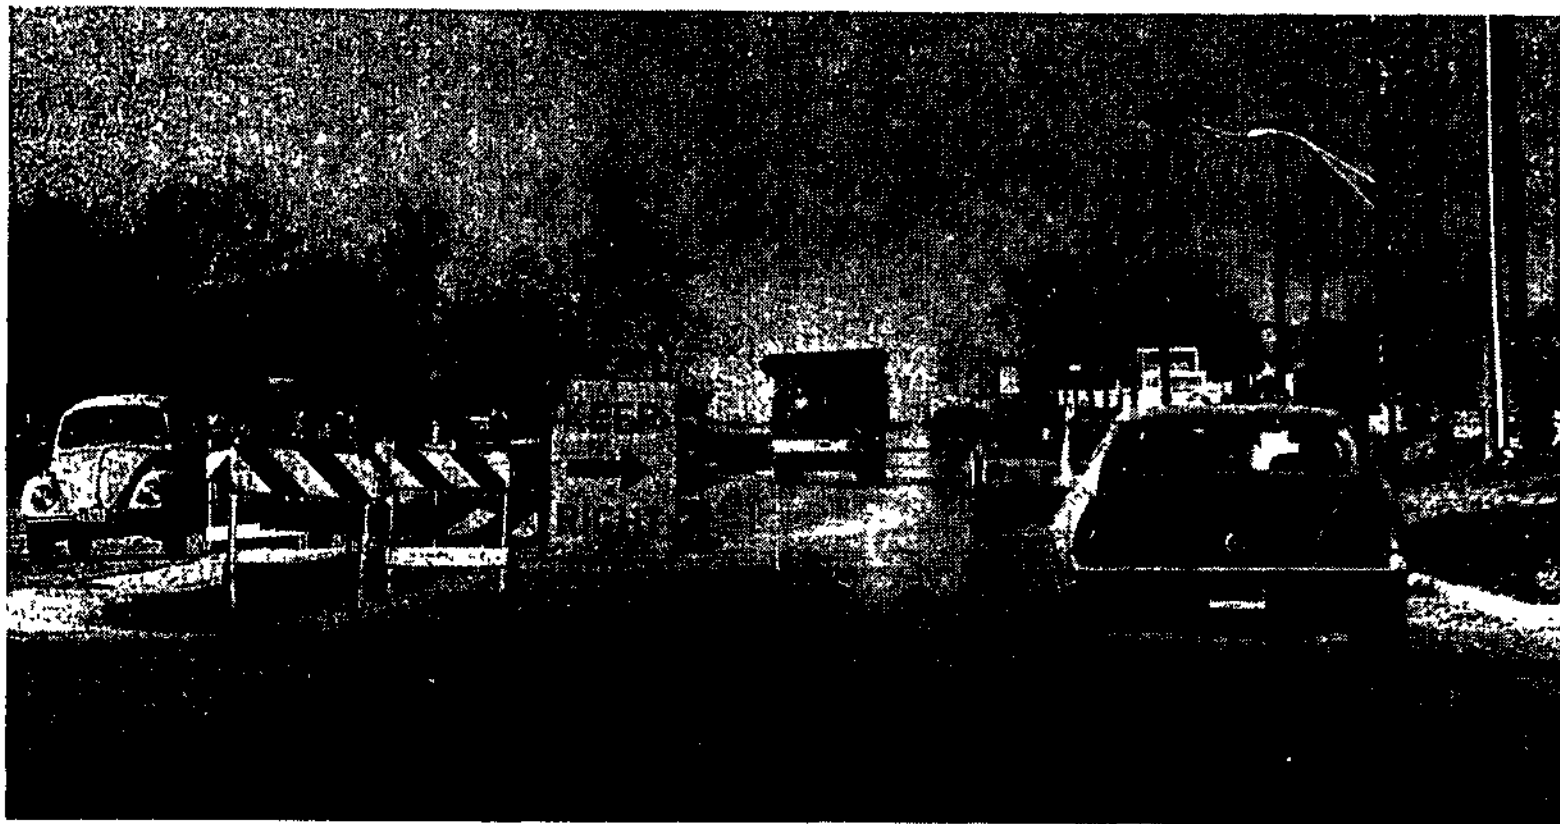

Without approval from Comprehensive Health Planning and a Blue Cross-Blue Shield contract, Franklin Boulevard probably will have difficulty obtaining financing.

A state law allows the hospital to finance part of the construction with general obligation bonds purchased through the county or municipality in order to obtain lower interest rates. Unless the hospital can show financing agencies it has a Blue Cross contract, however, the agencies are reluctant to commit financial support.

In addition, without a Blue Cross contract, the hospital would not be fully reimbursed for costs incurred by patients with that type of health insurance.

A SPOKESMAN for Blue Cross recently said more than 30 per cent of the persons in the United States are insured by the company. He said it has been the firm's policy since 1973 to require review of all hospital facilities by a local planning agency before entering into a contract.

Hospital officials plan to meet with Blue Cross officials this month about a contract. Although hospital officials admit not having a Blue Cross contract would create a financial hardship, they say a hospital is needed and they plan to proceed regardless of the outcome of the talks.

IT WON'T BE long now. An Illinois Dept. of Transportation engineer says three additional phases of the Dundee Road improvement project should be near completion within two weeks. The extension of Dundee west of Arlington Heights Road, relocation of Arlington Heights Road and refinishing of Buffalo Grove Road south of Dundee are yet to be completed. The $3 million project involves widening Dundee between Wheeling and Arlington Heights.

Should open to 4 lanes in 2 weeks

3 Dundee Rd. phases nearly done

Three additional phases of the Dundee Road improvement project should be near completion within two weeks, said Edward Gillon, an engineer for the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

Gillon said the Dundee Road extension west of Arlington Heights Road should be open to four lanes of traffic next week.

The $3 million Dundee Road project involves widening the road to four lanes between Ill. Rte. 83 in Arlington Heights, through Buffalo Grove, to Ill. Rte. 83 in Wheeling.

Gillon also said work on the relocated Arlington Heights Road is nearing completion and that roadway is slated for opening soon. Crews have finished resurfacing operations and are working on the medians. Grading and gutter work still remain to be done, Gillon said.

ALSO COMING to a close is refinishing work on Buffalo Grove Road south of Dundee. The entranceway to Buffalo Grove Road in front of the Ranch Mart Shopping Center has been closed while improvements were being made and for median installation about 600 feet north of the intersection.

Some sewer and road shoulder work still must be done and Gillon said the entranceway will stay closed until its completion. "We hate to work under traffic," he said.

Unseasonably warm weather has not only speeded up the work but Gillon said asphalt laid on warm days will set smoother, drain faster and eliminate maintenance problems that might have occurred if the weather had been colder.

All four lanes of Dundee Road between Buffalo Grove and Ill. Rte. 83 were opened recently after improvements on the section running through the village were completed.

GILLON ALSO said state officials have not yet handed down a decision on whether an estimated $10,000 to $11,000 saved on the Dundee Road median compromise can be used for landscaping the dividers.

Last September, village officials and community business leaders agreed on a plan calling for alternating sections of mountable and landscaped medians for the two-mile stretch of the Buffalo Grove roadway.

The savings comes from the use of top soil rather than asphalt on the landscaped sections.

State officials still were undecided on what types and size of trees could be planted, Gillon said.

Firm seeks to be annexed to village

Long Grove, builder on collision course

The Village of Long Grove and Miller Builders of Skokie are headed for what could be a lengthy legal battle over Miller's plans to build a large housing development near Buffalo Grove.

Attorneys for the firm and Long Grove attorneys are scheduled to appear Nov. 15 before Judge Harry R. Strouse in Lake County Circuit Court.

Richard Wexler, an attorney for Miller, said he will resubmit a petition at the hearing requesting the court approve the company's plan to annex to Buffalo Grove through a 600-foot-wide strip of land connecting the village to the proposed development site.

At a meeting last week, the Buffalo Grove Village Board accepted an annexation petition for the 415-unit development and turned the matter over to the plan commission for discussion at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

IF ALLOWED, Miller will build 308 houses and 107 townhouses on the 140-acre site known as the Stielow property east of Old Hicks Road between Old Checker Road and the Lake-Cook county line.

Long Grove boundaries border the site, however, and officials and residents of the village have raised a number of objections to the plan including density, traffic and sewer problems.

Village officials have vowed to fight the development in court and Wexler anticipated "Long Grove will litigate this thing as far as they can."

If the court rules in Miller's favor, Wexler said he expects Long Grove attorneys to file suit in an effort to block the development. He added the Popp family, owners of the property through which Miller hopes to annex, also may file an objection.

A LAKE COUNTY court last month ruled annexation through the Popp farm was legal and Miller officials were set to move ahead with scheduling the necessary public hearings before the village.

The ruling was later vacated at Wexler's request because a legal technicality developed over notification of the Long Grove Fire Protection District of Miller plans.

In accepting the request last week, the village board also decided to hold off on further official discussion, pending a court decision on Miller's annexation petition.

The matter will be taken up at workshop sessions until a court decision is handed down.

BUFFALO GROVE WHEELING UNITED FUND

$11,400 collected

Fund hits halfway mark

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund has passed the halfway mark in its efforts to raise $20,000 for this year's fund-raising campaign for local organizations and charities.

United Fund Pres. James Bauer said $11,400 has been raised, and he is optimistic the goal will be reached.

In a four-day period last week, Bauer said, the campaign raised $5,400. This year's United Fund drive was started two weeks ago and contributions will be coming in until Dec. 1.

"We're moving out sharply now," Bauer said. "I am very pleased with the way things have gone so far and hope we can keep up at the rate we're going."

LEADING THIS YEAR'S campaign, Bauer said, are the teachers and staff from High School Dist. 214 and Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21. The faculty and staff in the two districts have donated or committed about $7,000 to the campaign, he said.

"We have been getting unbelievable contributions from those school districts," Bauer said. "They are way ahead of the goal they were reaching for. Those teachers really realize the needs of the community."

The two biggest single contributions to the campaign, he said, came from McDonald's restaurant, 188 E. Dundee Rd., which donated about $1,400 and Hans' Bavarian Lodge, 831 N. Milwaukee Ave., which gave $500.

"Those two donations have really gotten our industrial and business campaign rolling," Bauer said. "We're hoping that others will follow their example."

BAUER SAID THE United Fund this year sent letters to every business, industry and home in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove asking for donations.

So far, he said, business and industry has donated about $1,100 in addition to the two previously mentioned contributions and residents have given about $1,400.

19-year-old nabbed for delinquency

A 19-year-old Buffalo Grove youth was charged Friday with possession of marijuana and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Police said Robert C. Wadsworth, 755 Grove Dr., was arrested at 10:15 p.m. after police responded to a call of a domestic disturbance. A minor, police said, had been staying in the apartment.

Wadsworth was released on $1,000 bond and is to appear Dec. 10 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

Village reviews plans for new works facility

The Buffalo Grove Village Board tonight will review plans for the public works facility to be built on a 4.8-acre site at the southeast corner of Lake-Cook Road and Raupp Boulevard.

Village Administrative Assistant William Balling said the board is moving ahead with plans for the $500,000 garage after a recent agreement on the Buffalo Grove golf course.

The garage site is being donated to the village by the Phoenix Corp., a firm that plans to develop land adjacent to the golf course.

In other matters to come before the board at 8 p.m. at 80 Raupp Blvd., village trustees are expected to:

- Review a request to extend a zoning variation for a Cambridge on the Lake building for an additional six months.
- Review appointments to the appearance control commission.
- Discuss the proposed fire service referendum.
- Act on a request for bids on the proposed emergency siren-warning system for the village.
- Act on a revised village gambling ordinance.
- Vote on a request to extend a special-use permit for a planned-unit development.

Youth, man face car damage charges

A Wheeling youth and a Mount Prospect man were arrested Saturday night by Mount Prospect police after they allegedly damaged several cars owned by Mark Motors.

Arrested were Donald C. Pinar, 21, of 1416 Sauk Ln., Mount Prospect, and Craig E. Christensen, 19, of 1415 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling. Both were charged with criminal damage to property, released on $1,000 bond and given a Nov. 13 court appearance in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

Police said a rearlight on one car had been broken with a beer can and another car had been written upon. They were arrested just before 11 p.m. in the parking lot of the former Jewel Food Store, 208 W. Northwest Hwy., where the cars were stored.

Friday accident cited

Parents see red over lack of yellow buses

by LINDA PUNCH

A group of North School parents is organizing a campaign to demand yellow school bus transportation for youngsters in Des Plaines Dist. 62 schools.

Karen Dykstra and Sandy Gannon, organizers of the campaign, said transit buses provided by United Motor Coach Inc., of Des Plaines are unsafe for elementary school students. They cited an incident Friday afternoon, in which a Chippewa Junior High School student was injured while getting off a UMC bus at Potter and Ballard roads.

John Penn, 12, of 219 Potter Rd., suffered bruises and scrapes of the leg when he caught his foot in the back door of the bus while exiting. Sheriff's police said the boy's legs were bumped as the bus pulled away. A witness to the accident said Penn's legs slipped under the back wheels of the bus.

Bus driver William J. Raddseich drove away from the scene, apparently unaware of the accident. He was later charged with leaving the scene of an accident and was released on $1,000 bond. The Penn boy was treated and released at Lutheran General Hospital.

"THE KID IS okay but why should it take a more serious accident before we do something about the buses," Mrs. Gannon said. "Does a child have to be killed before we do anything? My children will not be riding the buses until we get rid of United Motor Coach."

The two women began their campaign to replace UMC buses with legal school buses several weeks ago. The women noted that the transit buses are technically commercial carriers and are not subject to school-bus regulations.

Except for a sign marked "School" at the front of the bus, United Motor Coach school buses aren't distinguished from other commercial buses, Mrs. Dykstra said, adding that the bus drivers are not required to observe the same rules as regular school bus drivers.

"If the boy (Penn) was riding a yellow school bus this accident would never have happened. Yellow buses don't have back doors," Mrs. Dykstra said.

The women also complained that bus drivers fail to let youngsters off at stops nearest their homes.

"ONE DRIVER told a first grader to get off on River Road even though she lived at Suffolk and Good," Mrs. Gannon said. "The little girl told him she didn't live there but he made her get off anyway."

Both women met last Monday with Dist. 62 Business Mgr. Harold Brieschke and George Kelper, vice president of the bus firm, to discuss school bus transportation.

"We gave them a copy of state school bus regulations and asked them if they would comply. Of course, they said they couldn't," Mrs. Dykstra said.

While Kelper said UMC would change school routes so no children would have to cross streets, Mrs. Gannon said "so far it hasn't been done."

"He also swore up and down that students never use the back door when getting off but I've seen kids do it," Mrs. Dykstra added.

THE TWO WOMEN are now pushing for formation of a bus committee composed of parents, board members and administrators similar to one in East Maine Elementary Dist. 63.

The committee, which has no official powers, draws up requirements for the district bus service and seeks bids from bus companies. Parents then enter into "a gentlemen's agreement" with the company, usually for three-year periods.

Brieschke said he will arrange a meeting for the women with Dist. 62 Supt. Eric Sahlborg and Dist. 63 Business Mgr. James Bowen to discuss the bus committee.

The two women said they are considering boycotting UMC buses to express dissatisfaction with the service. Mrs. Dykstra also suggested that parents with complaints about the buses phone Sahlborg or Brieschke.

"I'M SURE Dr. Sahlborg is interested in the safety of the children," Mrs. Dykstra said. "If enough parents call, I think he'll realize we want some action."

Both women said they think most parents are dissatisfied with UMC service.

"Anyone who's had a child taking the bus knows the problems. We had no trouble getting signatures on the petitions," Mrs. Gannon said. "We spent more time listening to parents' complaints than getting the petitions signed."

Mrs. Gannon said parents aren't asking the district to become actively involved in yellow bus transportation.

"Parents already are paying $75 a year per child for United Motor Coach buses. If we're paying for it, why can't we have yellow buses," Mrs. Gannon said. "Our children are important. Why can't we have safe buses?"

The sky's the limit for the shoeless jumper.

Young, Mikva withdraw their charges

by STEVE BROWN

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, and his Democratic opponent, Abner J. Mikva, withdrew unfair campaign practices charges against each other Sunday after a three-man arbitration panel heard arguments for more than 28 hours.

In a joint statement, the candidates said the dispute could not be resolved and continuation of the hearing would serve no useful purpose.

Charges were filed last month with the Fair Campaign Practices Committee generally alleging each misrepresented his opponent's views in his campaign literature.

Young filed his complaint first, on Oct. 22. Mikva responded and also entered a counterclaim, charging misrepresentation by Young.

The final action of Sunday's arbitration session apparently surprised supporters of both candidates. The session, which was conducted in Chicago by the Midwest chapter of the American Arbitration Assn., began at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Both candidates and their aides attended portions of the session, which ran through the night. The hearing was closed to the press.

In their statement, the candidates said, "It now appears that the hearing cannot be completed before Tuesday's election and continuation of the hearing can serve no useful purpose."

The statement also noted that findings of the hearing could probably not be conveyed to the voters before the election. The three-man arbitration panel consisted of Samuel C. Thompson, Granger Cook and Richard A. Giangiorli.

Young's supporters indicated they felt the hearing was worthwhile even though their candidate missed several campaign appearances and the matter was not resolved.

They labeled the session the "first political arbitration of its kind in the nation."

Besides the misrepresentation charges, Young also said he believed Mikva's allegations charging him with a conflict of interest in regard to several congressional votes were not violations of any House rules.

Mikva had charged that Young misstated Mikva's views on several issues, including busing and gun control, to the voters of the 10th District.

Environment awards standards set

The Des Plaines Environmental Control Commission has issued a set of standards for awarding the city's new environmental patch to individuals and organizations.

The community activities, which must be voluntary, demonstrate initiative, require dedicated effort and perseverance, indicate a real concern for the environment result in a contribution to the improvement of the local environment, the commission said.

Patches will be awarded to individuals and certificates of merit will be given to organizations. Persons wishing more information may contact T. R. Pafahl, 1380 Henry St., Des Plaines.

Policewoman, who gave kidney, eager to work

Kathy Miller has been home from the hospital for three weeks and like most patients who get tired of lying around the house she is anxious to come back to work.

Work for Kathy is patrolling the streets of Des Plaines in a police squad car as one of the department's three new women officers.

Kathy, 23, is recovering from surgery last month to donate a kidney to her ailing sister, Marilyn Belmont, 30, Gurnee. Mrs. Miller last week said she and her sister are doing well and the operation appears to have been a complete success.

"My sister was released from the hospital last week, and the doctor says everything in her body chemistry is normal and the kidney is working well," Mrs. Miller said.

The kidney transplant was needed because Mrs. Belmont was suffering from terminal kidney disease and it was just a question of time before she would need the operation, her sister said.

MRS. MILLER said several members of her family, which includes five girls and one boy, were prepared to offer their sister a kidney. Mrs. Miller said after tests to determine blood type and tissue type were made, it was decided that she had the closest matching qualities to her sister and thus offered the best chance for a successful transplant.

Now that the operation is over and Mrs. Miller has had a chance to further recuperate at home, she said she is ready to return to her job.

"I'm getting bored watching soap operas and there's only so much house cleaning you can do," she said. Mrs. Miller said her doctor has assured her she can pursue normal activities, even for a police officer, when she returns to the department.

"I DON'T EXPECT people to take up any slack for me when I get back to work," she said. Mrs. Miller said her doctor has said she may be able to return to her job in about 2½ weeks.

Mrs. Miller is one of three women to join the police force this year. Other new policewomen are Mary Mundell and Kathryn Hammer.

Mrs. Miller is a former dance major at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle. She became interested in police work through her husband, who is an officer with the Elgin Police Dept.

Elk Grove girl, 10, shot to death

A 10-year-old Elk Grove Village girl was shot to death in her home Sunday afternoon and a 13-year-old boy was taken into custody in the shooting. Elk Grove Village police, who refused to identify the girl or the boy, said the two were alone in the home at the time of the shooting. The girl was pronounced dead at the scene by her family doctor and her body was taken to county morgue. Police said the boy was taken to the Audy Home Sunday night and information in the shooting would be presented today to the state's attorney's office. Police refused to provide any further information.

Parents seek bus safety

Parents in Des Plaines are organizing a campaign to demand yellow school bus transportation for youngsters in Des Plaines Dist. 62 schools. Children currently ride United Motor Coach Co. buses, which are not subject to stricter yellow school bus regulations. A 12-year-old boy suffered bruises and scrapes on his legs Friday when the bus pulled away while he was getting off through a rear door. The driver, William J. Radzевич, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident. One of the women organizing the yellow-bus campaign said: "Our children are important. Why can't we have safe buses?"

Elk Grove principal dies

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington. He had been principal since 1967 and had previously held administrative posts at Forest View and Prospect high schools. A memorial service will be held at Elk Grove High School at 10 a.m. Wednesday and school classes will be suspended that day.

Stavros-linked firm hired

Country Service and Supply Co., a firm linked to convicted political boss James Stavros, has been hired to excavate a parking lot at the Wheeling Village Hall. Village Mgr. George Passol said the Northbrook firm "was the only one we could get." He estimated the work would cost $1,000 and said he saw nothing wrong with hiring the firm. Stavros, who is serving a four-year federal prison term, has admitted working for Country Service. The company's president also has pleaded guilty to taking part in the $40,000 shake-down of a Wheeling developer by Stavros.

Free textbooks approved

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 voters Saturday overwhelmingly approved a referendum calling for elimination of textbook fees. The 1,418 to 153 vote means the district will pick up the cost of books instead of renting them to parents at a charge of $3.50 a year for kindergartners and $7.50 a year for first through eighth grades.

Kiwanians may be dropped

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of the Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark. Rather than revoke the local club's charter, said Maurice Myerson, Kiwanis lieutenant governor for this area, the Kiwanis International is more likely to drop members who stand behind Miss Clark. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law," Myerson said, referring to the Kiwanis no-women rule. "There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law."

Helton to take stand today

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the 1969 slaying of an Arlington Heights service station manager during a robbery. Videotapes of three varying 1969 accounts by Helton of the robbery and murder were played in court Friday. Two Arlington Heights policemen called as defense witnesses also testified that Helton visited their homes while he was in police custody and that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood.

Elk Grove High principal dies of heart attack

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington.

Haskell, principal of the high school since 1967, had been hunting with two of his four sons when he suffered the fatal heart attack about 9 a.m. Sunday.

A memorial service will be held at the high school, Arlington Heights Road and Elk Grove Boulevard, at 10 a.m. Wednesday. High school classes will be suspended that day, said Roderick C. McLennan, assistant superintendent for instruction of High School Dist. 214.

"BOB HASKELL has been in the school system for many years. He was elevated to principal because of his proven abilities," McLennan said. "He was well liked by the students and the staff. He will be missed as a very fine human being and as an excellent administrator."

Before being assigned as principal at Elk Grove High School, Haskell was an assistant principal for instructional services at Forest View High School for three years and was acting assistant principal at Prospect High School for a year. Haskell also served as a social science teacher and athletic trainer at Prospect.

In addition, he was treasurer of the Elk Grove Kiwanis Club, a member of the Elk Grove Community Services Board and president of the Mid-Suburban Board of Controls. He served three years

Kiwanis Club may drop backers of female member

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark.

The continuing controversy could be decided Saturday at the next meeting of the club, which has been threatened with loss of its charter by Kiwanis International.

The Kiwanis official, Maurice Myerson, lieutenant governor for the area district, believed the Elk Grove club would not lose its charter. He said he considered it more likely, instead, that members who choose to continue to back Miss Clark will be dropped from the Kiwanis membership rolls.

A majority of members of the local club voted to deny the order to oust Miss Clark, but Myerson said the vote did not reflect the sentiments of the entire club.

"There are too many members who have indicated they want to remain Kiwanians," Myerson told The Herald. "The club will probably lose some members who just don't want to abide by the Kiwanis constitution, which bars women from joining."

MISS CLARK was asked to join the club last February when her name was included in a bulk mailing. Her application and membership were processed through the international organization and approved without problems.

When the international became aware of its error, the local club was ordered to remove Miss Clark.

Myerson said he objects to the bad image he said the international has gotten because of the publicity surrounding the order.

"Every man who wears the 'K' is a member of Kiwanis International. It's not some mystical group pulling strings," he said. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law. There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law. They broke their own by-laws."

RICHARD HARRELL, president of the Elk Grove chapter, said the club will continue to discuss its options in view of an order by the international to drop Miss Clark from its roster or lose its charter.

Harrell declined to comment on the options that are open to the local chapter.

"Until the club takes action, everyone can speculate on all of this, but I just don't want to say what will happen," he said. "Hopefully it will be evident after the meeting what direction the club will be taking."

The Elk Grove club was directed Oct. 7 to drop Miss Clark, 26, head librarian at the Elk Grove Public Library, in two weeks. The deadline was later extended by the international to give the local chapter time to reverse its decision to support Miss Clark.

McNully says taste it or else, using a rolling pin to cooking. The popular class is taught by Joy Moody.

So, who needs girls anyway?

Students learning 'bachelor survival'

by BOB GALLAS

"This stuff looks awful. We must have done something wrong."

"You sure you got everything in this?"

"Whose egg is on the floor?"

The home economics rooms at several schools in High School Dist. 214 have been taken over by a group interested in survival — bachelor survival.

A course, designed to prepare males for life on their own after high school, is becoming more and more popular in the district, especially at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights.

WHAT STARTED out mainly as a cooking class for boys has evolved into a complete training program, said Joy Moody, who teaches "bachelor survival" classes at Forest View.

The course now covers housing, furniture, laundry and grooming in addition to the perennial favorite, cooking. Mrs.

Moody's three classes of 24 boys each are full.

"We offer what the guys will be able to use later, whether they go away to college or get an apartment and start working," said Mrs. Moody.

"Some guys still insist they'll find a girlfriend to cook, wash or iron. I tell them the girl will be happy to do it — for 20 cents a shirt," Mrs. Moody said with a laugh.

In the three years the one semester course has been offered at Forest View, it's grown to include virtually all the skills a male living at home might not be familiar with.

TO FAMILIARIZE students with housing, rental agents from apartment complexes are brought in to speak. Also discussed is how to pick roommates, Mrs. Moody said.

Furniture also is discussed. Students work with basic apartment blueprints and plan furniture layouts with pieces of paper. "They enjoy that. I think it brings out the child in them," Mrs. Moody said.

Next comes laundry, how to wash clothes and then iron them. "Most had the idea you had to read a big book to understand how to work a washer and dryer," she said.

A grooming section emphasizes buying clothes. "Some say they'll never wear a tie or a suit," Mrs. Moody said. "But I remind them they might want to wear one to their wedding."

Of course cooking is the most popular with the men, probably because they get to eat what they cook, she said.

The students divide up into "kitchens" or smaller groups that work together on baking projects. The projects range from making special desserts to main dishes.

WHILE SOME take the class only for the cooking — and eating, many also take it with an eye on the future.

"I plan to work the night shift when I graduate," said senior Dave Tolle. "So

Dog show signup open

Registration is open for the 25th annual Rand Park Dog Training Club show Dec. 1 at Elk Grove High School.

The show is open to all American Kennel Club registered breeds. Competition will be in four categories including novice, open, utility and graduate novice.

Dog owners may register their pet by calling Ken Roovaart at 824-4815.

Judging will begin at 8:30 a.m. and continue through the day. Spectators will be admitted with a $1 fee for adults and a 50-cent charge for children under 12.

I'll have to cook my own meals. I want to know what I'm doing."

While Mrs. Moody is on hand to answer questions, the students are usually on their own when it comes to cooking. "I try not to give too much of an opinion. I let them think. I'm not going to put them down."

Cleaning up also is taught, although the girls in the next class aren't too enthused over the job the boys do, Mrs. Moody said.

Of course the novice chefs have their problems, such as the student who washed a batch of apples after, rather than before, peeling them.

His apple crisp looked fine going into the oven, but the baking brought out all the water the apples soaked up. "The apple crisp turned out to be baked apples floating on water which everybody called 'the swamp,' she said.

LAST YEAR A group of football players also had some problems with ingredients.

"I guess it was their teamwork training carrying over. Each of them was assigned to add an ingredient."

"Well the guy with the salt got a little mixed up and read ½ tsp. to mean ½ cup. Nobody realized it until the next day when they tasted the brownies."

Residential area response poor

Fund chairman fears goal won't be reached

by LUISA GINETTI

The Elk Grove Village United Fund has received about 20 per cent of its goal but officials are concerned that at the present rate the month-old campaign will be struggling to meet its $22,000 target.

Michael Leyden, drive chairman, said funds raised from the industrial park are coming in at a good pace but the drive is hurting in contributions from residential areas.

"We've had a discouraging residential response so far from our mailings that went out Oct. 10 and I'm afraid we may have difficulties reaching the goal," Leyden said. "I'm worried that we might have been too aggressive in setting our goal but it may also be too early to tell what the outcome will be."

Leyden said the campaign last year surpassed its goal of $12,000 by collecting $16,500. Last year's goal represented double the amount set and reached in the 1972 drive, Leyden said.

THE CHAIRMAN said United Fund officials increased the goal this year using the assumption that the difference between this year's figure and last year's figure would be made up through increased contributions from the industrial community.

Although several companies have come through with large contributions, the poor response from residential mailings has put the drive at only 75 per cent of last year's collection through the same date. "It will be pretty tough to make our goal at this rate," Leyden said.

Leyden said workers are making more personal calls this year than last year in an attempt to raise funds for the drive. A second residential mailing also will be sent out within the next two weeks to try and raise some collections, Leyden said.

The chairman said the poor residential showing thus far could be due in part to people contributing to the Crusade of Mercy drive at work. "I'd be more than happy to know that residents aren't contributing to the local drive because they have already contributed where they work," Leyden said. "That would be okay because all the money goes to the same fund."

THE ELK GROVE United Fund is an arm of the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy.

Leyden said residential contributions to the campaign last year amounted to $3,800 or about 23 per cent of the total money raised.

Leyden said most of the $4,400 collected in this year's drive so far has come from the village's industrial area with no figures on collections from other divisions, such as Elk Grove Township Dist. 50, received yet.

The chairman said he still is hopeful contributions will increase and put the drive within its goal. "There are plenty more funds yet to come in," he said.

The drive will continue through December. Funds raised from the local campaign will be used to support Clearbrook Center, the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Mental Health Center, Northwest Suburban Homemaker Service and local Scoutling groups.

Kiwanis Club may drop backers of female member

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark.

The continuing controversy could be decided Saturday at the next meeting of the club, which has been threatened with loss of its charter by Kiwanis International.

The Kiwanis official, Maurice Myerson, lieutenant governor for the area district, believed the Elk Grove club would not lose its charter. He said he considered it more likely, instead, that members who choose to continue to back Miss Clark will be dropped from the Kiwanis membership rolls.

A majority of members of the local club voted to defy the order to oust Miss Clark, but Myerson said the vote did not reflect the sentiments of the entire club.

Girl, 10, dies in shooting

A 10-year-old Elk Grove Village girl was shot to death in her home Sunday afternoon and a 13-year-old boy was taken into custody in the shooting.

Elk Grove Village police, who refused to identify the girl or the boy, said the two were alone in the home at the time of the shooting. The girl was pronounced dead at the scene by her family doctor and her body was taken to the county morgue.

Police said the boy was taken to the Audy Home Sunday night and that information in the shooting would be presented today to the state's attorney's office.

Police refused to provide any further information.

"There are too many members who have indicated they want to remain Kiwanians," Myerson told The Herald. "The club will probably lose some members who just don't want to abide by the Kiwanis constitution, which bars women from joining."

MISS CLARK was asked to join the club last February when her name was included in a bulk mailing. Her application and membership were processed through the International organization and approved without problems.

When the International became aware of its error, the local club was ordered to remove Miss Clark.

Myerson said he objects to the bad image he said the international has gotten because of the publicity surrounding the order.

"Every man who wears the 'K' is a member of Kiwanis International. It's not some mystical group pulling strings," he said. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law. There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law. They broke their own by-laws."

RICHARD HARRELL, president of the Elk Grove chapter, said the club will continue to discuss its options in view of an order by the international to drop Miss Clark from its roster or lose its charter.

Harrell declined to comment on the options that are open to the local chapter.

"Until the club takes action, everyone can speculate on all of this, but I just don't want to say what will happen," he said. "Hopefully it will be evident after the meeting what direction the club will be taking."

The Elk Grove club was directed Oct. 7 to drop Miss Clark, 26, head librarian at the Elk Grove Public Library, in two weeks. The deadline was later extended by the international to give the local chapter time to reverse its decision to support Miss Clark.

High school principal dies while hunting

Robert
Haskell

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington.

Haskell, principal of the high school since 1967, had been hunting with two of his four sons when he suffered the fatal heart attack about 9 a.m. Sunday.

A memorial service will be held at the high school, Arlington Heights Road and Elk Grove Boulevard, at 10 a.m. Wednesday. High school classes will be suspended that day, said Roderick C. McLennan, assistant superintendent for instruction of High School Dist. 214.

"BOB HASKELL has been in the school system for many years. He was elevated to principal because of his proven abilities," McLennan said. "He was well liked by the students and the staff. He will be missed as a very fine human being and as an excellent administrator."

Before being assigned as principal at Elk Grove High School, Haskell was an assistant principal for instructional services at Forest View High School for three years and was acting assistant principal at Prospect High School for a year. Haskell also served as a social science teacher and athletic trainer at Prospect.

In addition, he was treasurer of the Elk Grove Kiwanis Club, a member of the Elk Grove Community Services Board and president of the Mid-Suburban Board of Controls. He served three years in the U.S. Army during World War II, earning a bronze star award.

HASKELL, 290 BANBURY Ave., Elk Grove Village, is survived by his widow, Evelyn M. Haskell, nee Varner; four sons, Robert E. of Roselle, Edward A. of Elk Grove Village, James M. of Arlington Heights and Ronald T. of Elk Grove Village; sister, Anita Oestmann of Chicago Heights; and mother, Bessie Haskell of Chicago Heights. He was a former Mount Prospect resident.

Visitation will be from 6 to 8:30 p.m. today at the Hub Funeral Chapel, 1361 Otto Blvd., Chicago Heights, and from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at Friedrichs Funeral Home, 320 W. Central Rd., Mount Prospect. There will be a 10 a.m. Wednesday service at Elk Grove High School, followed by burial at Skyline Memorial Park, Monee.

Session delayed due to principal's death

Due to the death of Robert Haskell, Elk Grove High School principal, tonight's Jaycees "accountability night" has been rescheduled to 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 11 at Elk Grove High School.

The town hall session, The "Town Hall" session, planned by the Jaycees, will feature the Elk Grove Village president and board of trustees.

The sky's the limit for the shoeless jumper.

Police probe needle in Halloween candy

Elk Grove Village police are investigating a report Friday that a sewing needle was placed in a child's candy bar which was collected during trick-or-treating.

Joanne Hauser, 219 Brookhaven Dr., told police she had found a needle in a candy bar received by her son, Jimmy, 8, on Thursday. Mrs. Hauser said she did not know who might be responsible for placing the object in the candy because her son had collected three other similar candy bars in a Halloween route through the neighborhood.

Free textbooks for schools OK'd by voters

A referendum eliminating textbook fees received the overwhelming approval Saturday of voters in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Saturday.

The free textbooks were approved by a margin of 9 to 1 with 1,418 voting yes and 153 voting no. Dist. 54 will now pick up the cost of the textbooks instead of renting the books to parents. Parents had been paying $3.50 per year for books used in kindergarten and $7.50 for books used in first through eighth grades.

No book fees were charged to parents this year. According to the Illinois School Code the district must supply free books for at least three more years and must hold another referendum to re-instate the book fee. Last year Dist. 54 spent $168,822 on textbooks and collected $112,706 in rental fees.

The Dist. 54 Board of Education decided to sponsor the referendum after reviewing the district's five-year financial projection. The projection shows a surplus in funds for the next few years which could be used to pay for textbooks. This year's budget includes district payment of books and it still contains a surplus of about $818,268. School officials emphasized that the free books will not mean an increase in the district's tax rate.

The referendum passed in all 12 of the district's precincts. School officials expected a no vote from parents of students in the three parochial schools in the district but, said Associate Supt. Milton Derr, there appeared to be no organized opposition to Saturday's referendum.

Robber takes $7,000 from Hippo's

More than $7,000 in cash was reported stolen early Saturday in an armed robbery at Hippo's Hot Dogs, Higgins and Plum Grove roads, Schaumburg.

The restaurant's owners, Jerry and Karen Zigowicz, were pistol-whipped by two armed robbers about 12:25 a.m. as they were leaving after locking up the building, police said.

The Zigowicz's were slightly injured. They were transported to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, by a Schaumburg Fire Dept. ambulance, treated and released.

A gold ring was taken from Zigowicz's hand along with the cash which was stored in a safe, police said.

Trustees to meet with residents today

Elk Grove Village trustees will meet with residents at 8 p.m. today in an accountability session at Elk Grove High School, 500 W. Elk Grove Blvd.

The meeting has been arranged by the Elk Grove Jaycees to give residents a chance to talk informally with village officials about problems and matters of interest in the community.

Representatives of the newly formed Elk Grove Arts Guild also will discuss activities planned by the group.

The two bandits were waiting in weeds when the owners left through the rear door. The robbers brandished weapons and forced the pair back inside the building, police said.

Zigowicz was ordered to open the safe, and after doing so, he and his wife were struck on the head by the intruders, police said.

Authorities said they were searching for two men in their 20s, traveling in a late-model, cream-colored Cadillac.

So, who needs girls anyway?

Students learning 'bachelor survival'

by BOB GALLAS

"This stuff looks awful. We must have done something wrong."

"You sure you got everything in this?"

"Whose egg is on the floor?"

The home economics rooms at several schools in High School Dist. 214 have been taken over by a group interested only in survival — bachelor survival.

A course, designed to prepare males for life on their own after high school, is becoming more and more popular in the district, especially at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights.

WHAT STARTED out mainly as a cooking class for boys has evolved into a complete training program, said Joy Moody, who teaches "bachelor survival" classes at Forest View.

The course now covers housing, furniture, laundry and grooming in addition to the perennial favorite, cooking. Mrs.

Moody's three classes of 24 boys each are full.

"We offer what the guys will be able to use later, whether they go away to college or get an apartment and start working," said Mrs. Moody.

"Some guys still insist they'll find a girlfriend to cook, wash or iron. I tell them the girl will be happy to do it — for 20 cents a shirt," Mrs. Moody said with a laugh.

In the three years the one semester course has been offered at Forest View, it's grown to include virtually all the skills a male living at home might not be familiar with.

TO FAMILIARIZE students with housing, rental agents from apartment complexes are brought in to speak. Also discussed is how to pick roommates, Mrs. Moody said.

Furniture also is discussed. Students work with basic apartment blueprints and plan furniture layouts with pieces of paper. "They enjoy that. I think it brings out the child in them," Mrs. Moody said.

Next comes laundry, how to wash clothes and then iron them. "Most had the idea you had to read a big book to understand how to work a washer and dryer," she said.

A grooming section emphasizes buying clothes. "Some say they'll never wear a tie or a suit," Mrs. Moody said. "But I remind them they might want to wear one to their wedding."

Of course cooking is the most popular with the men, probably because they get to eat what they cook, she said.

The students divide up into "kitchens" or smaller groups that work together on baking projects. The projects range from making special desserts to main dishes.

WHILE SOME take the class only for the cooking — and eating, many also take it with an eye on the future.

"I plan to work the night shift when I graduate," said senior Dave Tolle. "So I'll have to cook my own meals. I want to know what I'm doing."

While Mrs. Moody is on hand to answer questions, the students are usually on their own when it comes to cooking. "I try not to give too much of an opinion. I let them think. I'm not going to put them down."

Cleaning up also is taught, although the girls in the next class aren't too enthused over the job the boys do, Mrs. Moody said.

Of course the novice chefs have their problems, such as the student who washed a batch of apples after, rather than before, peeling them.

His apple crisp looked fine going into the oven, but the baking brought out all the water the apples soaked up. "The apple crisp turned out to be baked apples floating on water which everybody called 'the swamp,'" she said.

LAST YEAR A group of football players also had some problems with ingredients.

"I guess it was their teamwork training carrying over. Each of them was assigned to add an ingredient."

"Well the guy with the salt got a little mixed up and read ½ tsp. to mean ½ cup. Nobody realized it until the next day when they tasted the brownies."

Helton to testify today; 4th report of murder expected

by JOE SWICKARD

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the murder of an Arlington Heights gas station manager five years ago.

Helton, 22, is charged with the slaying of Fred J. Tallon, the 64-year-old night manager of the Arlington Park Shell service station, Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue, in the predawn hours of Nov. 11, 1969.

The bench trial, entering its fourth day before Circuit Court Judge Jacques F. Hellingoetter at the Civic Center, already has heard, through written statements and video tapes, Helton giving three conflicting stories of his role in the fatal stabbing of Tallon.

Two policemen called as defense witnesses, testified Friday that Helton was allowed to leave jail the day after his arrest for a holiday meal with his family and that they each took him to their homes after he was charged with murder. They also said Helton was given money by the Arlington Heights police chief while he was expected to be a prosecution witness.

A VIDEO TAPE of Helton's third version of the crime was played Friday in court. In it the then 17-year-old defendant named James Ales as the killer who pursued Tallon across Wilke Road. Helton told how Ales pushed the victim through the gas station window after first stabbing him to prevent a phone call for help. Ales then repeatedly stabbed Tallon in his futile struggles and flight to escape, Helton said.

The tape, taken on Dec. 31, 1969 at the Arlington Heights police station, is in direct conflict with tapes made Dec. 28 and Dec. 27 while Helton was being held in the Du Page County jail on other charges.

In the first written statement and taped account, Helton said Raymond Katzensky was the killer and that Katzensky had related the story to him as "pointers" on how to commit a robbery and a sure method of stabbing someone to death.

The next day Helton changed his story, saying he accompanied Katzensky on the crime but was unaware that his alleged partner was armed. He further said he was prevented from intervening by another member of the robbery team, Robert Fucini, who held him at bay with a pistol.

IN THE THIRD version, Katzensky was dropped entirely and replaced with a James Lowecke, who Helton said waited in the car.

In this version, Ales rifled the victim's pockets of money and took his wedding band before returning to the station to clean out the cash register, Helton said. Again, Helton said, Fucini covered him with a pistol and the killer pointed the weapon at him and called him "nothing but a chicken."

Helton recounted how the alleged killer wiped the knife with a rag and then passed around Tallon's wedding band. Everyone in the car tried on the ring, Helton said.

"They passed it around. And mine was the only one it would go down on," Helton said on the tape demonstrating slipping the ring over his knuckle.

He said he did not get a share of the $37 reported stolen because "I turned chicken on them."

On the tape he was asked why he again was changing his story, Helton answered that he had been threatened by Ales. He said Ales, also being held at the Du Page County jail, passed the word through other prisoners that he would be killed if he talked.

ASKED WHY he had named Katzensky in earlier versions, Helton said it was Ales' plan. "Jim was using him as a sucker . . . use him as a sucker all the way through."

Katzensky and Fucini were arrested in Georgia while Helton and Ales traveled to Florida and back, a trip financed by robbing motels. Ales and Helton were arrested in Du Page County on other charges when they returned in late December, 1969.

After playing the third tape, Asst. State's Atty. Lee Hettinger rested the prosecution and defense Attorney Melvin Kamm moved for a directed acquittal of Helton. Hellingoetter denied the motion.

LT. GEORGE EKBLAD, who already had appeared for the prosecution, then testified that neither he nor other members of the police prompted, coached or induced Helton in his statements of December 1969. He said he "never" offered the defendant rewards in exchange for his cooperation.

Ekblad denied the defense contention that Helton was kept in an unlocked cell and was paid to perform chores around the station.

However, the 15-year police veteran testified that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood, and that he (Ekblad) took Helton to his home on at least one occasion. Helton also was allowed to go with his family on a holiday meal, the day after he was charged with murder, but that he was escorted by two detectives at the time, Ekblad said.

Helton remained in Arlington Heights rather than being transferred to the County jail, because Ekblad said he "understood" the State's Attorney's office had gotten a stay of transfer order because Helton, at that time, was going to be a witness for the prosecution.

UNDER CROSS-examination, Ekblad said that both Helton and his parents were glad that he was not taken to the County Jail.

Det. Gene Deck, the second defense witness, also testified Helton was not given favors nor worked for a salary around the police station. However, Deck said he also took Helton to his home "once that I can recall."

Deck said Helton remained in the Arlington Heights lockup because there "was no room for him in the county (jail) witness area."

Helton will be called upon today as the last witness to give his version of his treatment and status while in jail and his part, if any, in the five-year-old crime.

Parks seek bids on building wing

The Elk Grove Park Board is ready to seek bids on an estimated $45,000 addition to the park district administration building, 499 Biesterfeld Rd.

Architectural drawings for the proposed addition are nearly complete and park officials are planning to open bids at the regularly scheduled Nov. 14 board meeting.

The new wing is to include space for several offices plus a small storage area for audio-visual equipment. The administration building is being expanded to consolidate all park district offices in the central building. Some offices also are at the Lions' Park Community Center and the Disney Swimming Pool complex.

Jack Claes, director of parks and recreation, Friday said he hopes construction will begin before Christmas. Depending on the availability of materials, the work should take about three or four months to complete, he said.

The new wing will be financed with funds remaining from a $250,000 bond issue of two years ago. Proceeds from the bond sale also were used to develop a park in the north end of the village, purchase playground equipment for Daniel Cook School, build a garage for park district vehicles and make landscape improvements at several parks.

Five seeking vacant post on township library board

Five candidates are seeking the vacant post on the Schaumburg Township Library Board. A decision on a new trustee is expected to come Wednesday.

The fifth candidate, Louis S. Ryseff, was announced by the library board last week. Four other candidates, three men and one woman, also have applied for the position.

The vacant seat was created by the resignation in October of Richard Miller.

Ryseff, Hoffman Estates, is a financial manager for the Motorola Communications and Electronics Division in Schaumburg. He is an electrical engineer with special training in accounting and finance.

OTHERS WHO HAVE applied for the seat are Leon A. Youssef of Hoffman Estates and the Rev. Paul B. Tinlin, Walter J. North and Jo Telford, all of Schaumburg.

Youssef is a former financial consultant to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry of Saudi Arabia. He is an associate professor at Roosevelt University, specializing in the role and application of computers in the fields of accounting, finance and managerial decisions.

Mrs. Telford is language arts consultant for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. She has been a teacher for seven years and a psycho-educational diagnostician.

North is a former member of the library board and is an accountant at Carlson International Co.

Tinlin is pastor of the Evangel Assembly of God church.

Selection of a trustee is expected to come when the board meets Wednesday for its regular monthly meeting. Librarian Michael Madden said four of the six board members must agree on a candidate in order for approval.

Candidates will be interviewed by the board at the meeting before the vote.

Municipal fire service on agenda

Ordinances establishing a municipal fire department and levying a tax on estate sales will be discussed again tonight by the Hoffman Estates Village Board.

The ordinances, presented for first readings last week, are being reviewed by officials in preparation for passage.

The fire ordinances must be passed before a municipal department can be created and must accompany legal action by the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District to dissolve itself.

The village has agreed to assume responsibility for fire protection services from the debt-ridden district. The transfer had been planned this month, but legal delays will put off the move at least until the end of the year, village officials learned last week.

The fire district annexation is being prompted by a need for more money to provide for services. The fire district is at its maximum allowable taxing rate, but is estimated to be as much as $240,000 in debt due mainly to the cost of salaries.

TO PAY FOR the anticipated debt, the village already has authorized the levy of a 5 per cent utility tax beginning Jan. 1. The tax is expected to generate about $300,000 yearly and will be charged for two years. Cost to most homeowners is expected to be $25 to $50 yearly.

Another tax under study is one which would tax buyers of property in the village. The real estate transfer tax would collect up to about one-tenth of 1 per cent the cost of property purchased. An average home selling for $40,000 would carry a $40 tax charge, according to the proposal.

The City of Chicago has a similar tax. Last week trustees voted to return the proposal to committee for further study and to determine whether the tax should be imposed on the buyer or the seller of property.

Trustees are also expected to review a preliminary report on a comprehensive plan for bicycle paths in the village. Officials have discussed the feasibility of providing paths and also have consulted with state highway officials about including a bike path along Golf Road when improvement work begins next year.

The village board meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the council chambers of the municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

Vandals strike in High Point area

Seven vandalism incidents including slashed car tires and trees being cut down in and near the High Point area of Hoffman Estates were reported Sunday morning to police.

The victims were John Keller, 128 Fairfield Ln., car tires slashed; Betty Byrnes, 253 Lancaster Ln., tree cut down; Edward Krantz, 274 E. Nottingham Ln., three trees cut down; William Bishop, 427 Glen Lake Dr., car tires slashed; Daniel Matusiewicz, 359 Shepherd Rd., his house doors wired shut; Louise Wagner, 305 Lancaster Ln., bush ripped out, and Melvin Bowden, 100 Fairfield Ln., boat cover slashed.

Money available for Knightsbridge subdivision work

A cash escrow account and redeemed letters of credit totaling $75,000 will provide enough money to complete street lighting and other public improvements in Schaumburg's Knightsbridge subdivision, John Coste, Schaumburg village administrator, said.

Work resumes on house in 'The Woods'

Construction of a $75,000 house in The Woods of Schaumburg resumed Friday when a stop work order, issued by the village the previous day, was lifted.

An allegation of safety and health problems made by Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Sterle, 321 Forest Ln., who live next door to the house under construction, prompted the stop order, said Village Administrator John Coste.

Coste said he considered the stop order the quickest way to resolve problems disclosed last week when the Sterles objected to a four-foot embankment between the houses created by The Tomlin Co., builders of the home, when construction started recently.

The Sterles also say they consider a fence and retaining wall being constructed by Viron Lefty, owner of the new home, hazardous and unsightly.

A meeting among village officials, the two neighbor couples, and Leonard V. Pantaleo, of Tomlin, was held Friday morning, Coste said. At that time it was determined that no village ordinances or building codes were being violated either by the builder or Lefty, Coste added.

At the request of the Sterles, The Woods Homeowners Assn. earlier last week attempted negotiating a settlement with Tomlin requiring the builder to provide Lefty with material for the fence and wall, to reconstruct a drain from the wall to the sidewalk and replace any dirt or sod on the Sterle lot which might be disturbed. The agreement was rejected by the Sterles and they resigned from the homeowners association.

Scouting news

Adrienne Wolfe of Junior Troop 683 of Schaumburg won first place in a patch design contest conducted as a warmup for the upcoming "Look-Wide" show sponsored by the Girl Scouts of Schaumburg Township.

Frank S. Carter III of Boy Scout Troop 237 of Hoffman Estates has been awarded the Eagle Silver Palm. He became an Eagle Scout in October 1973. The Silver Palm is awarded for earning 15 merit badges more than the amount required for Eagle Scout status.

Boy Scout Troop 329 of Hoffman Estates will hold a spaghetti dinner at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in St. Hubert auditorium, 126 Grand Canyon Blvd., Hoffman Estates.

The dinner is part of the troop's Court of Honor celebration.

Environment panel studies impact law

An ordinance requiring submission of an environmental impact statement on all future projects requiring village financing or village board action is being examined by Schaumburg's environmental committee.

The committee is studying a model ordinance, based on one being considered by the City of Elmhurst, said Alan Larson, chairman.

Larson said the committee began "looking at" the ordinance last week and stressed that consideration is in preliminary stages, though, the law eventually may be recommended to the village board for adoption.

Another ordinance, calling for preservation of trees and insurance that future land development will include plantings, is also being discussed by the committee, Larson said.

Robber takes $7,000 from Hippo's

More than $7,000 in cash was reported stolen early Saturday in an armed robbery at Hippo's Hot Dogs, Higgins and Plum Grove roads, Schaumburg.

The restaurant's owners, Jerry and Karen Zigowicz, were pistol-whipped by two armed robbers about 12:25 a.m. as they were leaving after locking up the building, police said.

The Zigowicz's were slightly injured. They were transported to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, by a Schaumburg Fire Dept. ambulance, treated and released.

A gold ring was taken from Zigowicz's

Two letters of credit totaling $87,500 were redeemed by the village from The Bank of Antioch Oct. 1. Builder Nick Herman had established a $7,500 escrow account with the village prior to the start of construction on the 40-home area north of Higgins Road and west of Jones Road.

Herman, in apparent default on completion of the subdivision, has experienced financial difficulties recently and has been unable to complete several homes in the first unit.

Bids for a street lighting contract will be opened at Tuesday's village board meeting with installation to begin as soon as possible, Coste said.

OTHER IMPROVEMENTS, which include finish coat application on one street, repair of sidewalks and parkway tree planting, will be done in spring or early summer, Coste said.

"The village has no concern about the adequacy of this money to cover the remaining work needed in Knightsbridge," he said, emphasizing that the $75,000 is "absolutely enough" to complete the project.

Knightsbridge homeowners recently disclosed they were contacted by Internal Revenue Service agents who requested they turn over copies of records of their home purchases.

Coste said IRS agents also have questioned the village in their apartment investigation of Herman. That probe, however, is not believed linked to an investigation of the village undertaken about 18 months ago by U.S. Atty. James Thompson.

Walden resident charged with burglary

A resident in the Walden complex in northeastern Schaumburg was arrested Saturday night after a break-in at the Walden rental office, 1834 Walden Sq., police said.

Charged with burglary was Frank G. Cuccio, 49, of 1931 Song Sparrow Ct., Schaumburg.

Cuccio was arrested about 11:50 p.m. by Sgt. Robert Specht and Ken Mazikowski, a police reserve sergeant, inside the office, police said. The police were responding to a citizen's report of breaking glass at the rental office.

Police said they found a man inside the building rifling through desk drawers. The man had a cashbox containing $12 in cash, authorities said.

Entry was gained by breaking out a window on the east side of the building, police reported.

Cuccio was being held by Schaumburg police pending a bond hearing. He is scheduled to appear Nov. 13 in the Schaumburg branch of Circuit Court.

Registration for library programs today

Registration will be today for programs offered by the Schaumburg Township Library.

Programs will include preschool story hours for children 3 to 5 years old, a merry-go-round program for children in first to third grade and a new Book Looks program for fourth and fifth graders.

Programs begin next week and will run through the week of Dec. 9. A special Thanksgiving puppet show also will be shown at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Registration for library programs may be done in person or by telephone except for the preschool story hour classes, which must be registered for in person.

Sewing patterns are being sought by the Schaumburg Township Public Library to create a collection which patrons may borrow as part of a new library service.

Persons with patterns to donate should bring them to the library.

Trustees plan hearing on K-Mart annexation

Continuation of a hearing before Hoffman Estates Village Board on annexation plans for a proposed K-Mart shopping center is scheduled today at 7 p.m.

The hearing is being held to consider plans by E. N. Malsel & Associates to build a shopping center on 18 acres between Higgins and Golf roads adjacent to Gannon Drive. The shopping center would include a K-Mart store, a division of S. S. Kresge Co., and nine other shops, including grocery stores.

Part of the land lies within the village limits but a portion would have to be annexed.

Barrington Rd. interchange work under way

Improvement work is under way to improve traffic access to and from the Northwest Tollway at Barrington Road.

John Sedivy, engineer with the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority, said the project will provide ramps to allow westbound tollway traffic to exit onto both north and southbound Barrington Road.

Currently only one exit services Barrington Road. It is controlled by a temporary traffic signal.

Another ramp under construction will allow southbound traffic on Barrington Road to enter the eastbound tollway. Southbound traffic on Barrington currently has access to the eastbound tollway traffic only by crossing over northbound Barrington Road lanes.

The work is being done by the Eric Bolander Construction Co., Sedivy said. Cost is to be $2,913,324 to be paid by the toll highway authority.

The work is the only ramp improvement under way along the western part of the tollway.

When the project was announced two years ago, work had been scheduled to begin in 1973 with completion anticipated by this year.

However, reduced collections along the tollway last year due to the energy crisis restricted financing for construction and delayed the Barrington Road interchange work, which will not be finished until Sept. 1975.

Two township youths nabbed for purse snatch

Two Palatine Township youths were arrested by Palatine police in connection with a purse-snatching incident Saturday in which an elderly woman suffered a broken finger at the Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

Schaumburg police charged Jeffrey Henderson, 17, whose last known address was 1502 Northwest Hwy., and a 15-year-old youth with robbery. Henderson was charged by Palatine police with auto theft after the pair were stopped while traveling in a truck believed stolen Thursday night from Palatine.

Schaumburg police put out a description of the stolen vehicle, and Palatine Patrolman Stan Rajski stopped truck matching the description at the Willow Creek apartment complex about 35 minutes after the incident, police said.

Schaumburg police reported that a purse containing $60 in cash was wrestled from Ragna Moe, 62, Chicago, while at the parking lot near Marshall Field & Co. Mrs. Moe was knocked down and suffered a broken finger.

She was released after emergency treatment at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

Henderson was being held by Palatine police in lieu of $15,000 bond. The 15-year-old was transferred to the Cook County Juvenile Detention Center in Chicago.

Schaumburg's No. 1! Playoffs next

Super Bowl victory gives Dist. 211 1st title since '69

by KEITH REINIARD

It was the smallest of margins but the biggest of prizes.

By a single point Friday evening the Schaumburg Saxons became the gridiron lords of the Mid-Suburban League. The score was 7-6 over defending Super Bowl champion Hersey and the game was every bit as close as that score, decided finally by an extra-point kick.

But the gritty Saxons, the upstarts of the MSL, knocked off the vaunted Huskies on Hersey's own field, using a simple option offense led by junior quarterback Russ Zonca. The 5-foot-11 190-pound Saxon signalcaller showed the desire of a winner and, in the end, it was his running that made the difference.

Zonca ran inside, he ran outside, he ricocheted off a tremendous number of enemy jerseys and spewed up a lot of dust and turf. Zonca also ran across the goal line to pull his Saxons back into the ball game in the late going and set the stage for the upset verdict.

Schaumburg's tally came three plays into the fourth quarter after they had trailed by a 6-0 count for nearly two full periods and speculation was on the increase about an infallible Hersey defense. It was a 55-yard gallop by Zonca that set up the stalemate and a boot from the veteran toe of Roger Biver that quickly dissolved it.

The outcome produced several ramifications: Coach Bob Ferguson's outfit will now advance as the circuit's first representative in the state grid playoffs beginning Wednesday.

It also marked the first victory by a Dist. 211 school in the five-year-old Super Bowl and the third straight major sports title scooped up by them (Conant won last year's basketball playoff and Fremd captured the succeeding baseball crown).

The decision also made it three in a row for 111 this fall, following Palestine's triumph over the golf circuit and Fremd's continuing cross country dominance.

The Schaumburg victory Friday came neither swiftly nor overpoweringly. Although there was plenty of running room for both clubs, it was the defenses that ruled the gridiron.

Hersey went on a march to open the contest that consumed over half the field in 10 plays down to the enemy 16. Ken Jaffke and Bob Jones subsequently broke through to nail hard-nosed Huskie half-back Jeff Forster for an eight-yard loss and move them out of field goal range.

So Hersey went for the TD and Mike Marx intercepted a Scott Topczewski pass on fourth down to snuff out the threat.

The visitors had even less success on offense and Hersey was back in control following a punt at their own 30 with the first period coming to a close.

This time Topczewski spiced the running of Forster with passes to Chip Nowak and Chris Viviano in a crisp nine-play march to paydirt. The capper was a beautifully executed aerial from the junior Huskie quarterback that caught Dave Carey on the run in the left corner of the end zone from 13 yards out.

The following extra point kick attempt was just a bit wide to the right but it seemed hardly significant at the time. Hersey was having little difficulty moving the ball.

After trading punts, with the first half closing out, Schaumburg moved into high gear offensively, too. A pass from Zonca to Tom Martino and first down scampers by both of them were instrumental in a 49-yard drive penetrating to the Hersey 18.

The threat ended there, however, one yard shy of a first down and the 6-6 score remained on the board through intermission.

In the third stanza the guests stalled

Saxons to host Leyden Wednesday

St. Viator vs. Deerfield at a site to be determined!
Schaumburg vs. East Leyden at Schaumburg!

That's the way the area representatives will match up Wednesday in the first Illinois High School Association football tournament.

Pairings were announced Saturday night by the IHSA.

First round games will get underway Wednesday, with those winners meeting in quarterfinal games next Saturday. Semifinals will be held Nov. 16 with finals in all five classes scheduled for Illinois State University in Normal Nov. 22-23.

Other Class 5A pairings find Niles West (7-1) at Willowbrook (7-2), Glenbrook North (8-0) at Evanston (8-1), Hillcrest (8-0) at Homewood-Flossmoor (8-1), Gordon Tech (8-0) at Hinsdale Central (7-2), Quincy (8-1) at East St. Louis (9-0), and Glenbard West (8-1) at Naperville (8-1).

Schaumburg won the Mid-Suburban title with a 7-6 victory over Hersey Friday evening. St. Viator was voted the champion of the East Suburban Catholic Conference after finishing in a deadlock for the crown.

Additional details on the playoff games involving Schaumburg and St. Viator will appear in Tuesday and Wednesday sports.

Fergie:

'We've worked so hard for this... now we've got it!'

by ART MUGALIAN

Bob Ferguson calmly and patiently explained how and why his Schaumburg Saxons became the 1974 Mid-Suburban League Super Bowl champions Friday night at Hersey. A bevy of excited reporters scribbled down every word the Saxon coach spoke.

Then the ordinarily mild-mannered and subdued Ferguson made his triumphant entrance onto the Schaumburg team bus, already loaded to the brim with wildly exuberant Saxons who were just beginning to realize that they indeed would be returning home with the Super Bowl trophy.

At that point the Saxon coach let go all his pent-up emotions.

"I guess we made believers out of them!" Ferguson exclaimed and his players echoed the chant that comes from all winners.

"We're number one!" they chorused over and over.

And, of course, the Schaumburg Saxons are No. 1 following their 7-6 victory over the Hersey Huskies in a performance that would make believers out of the most cynical fan.

"It's gonna be another shower for you, coach!" yelled Ferguson's happy heroes when the coach finally reached the bus.

Ferguson's stoic demeanor and quiet confidence gave way in the end to sincere joy.

"I feel really elated," the coach said before boarding the team bus for the trip back to Schaumburg and who knows how many victory parties. "We've worked so hard for this — the principals, the athletic director, the whole coaching staff, everybody. Now we've got it!"

The Saxons won and they will advance to the state's first gridiron playoffs because they played the typical hardnosed Schaumburg football game. A Saxon victory wouldn't be complete without at least one heartstopping run by junior quarterback Russ Zonca and a rousing goal line stand by the Schaumburg defenders.

But the man of the hour was Roger Biver, whose sure-footed extra-point kick provided Schaumburg's winning margin.

"You're the hero," someone suggested to Biver, and the long-haired kicker just grinned and agreed.

"I know, it feels great," Biver shouted.

What was Roger thinking when he booted the winning point with 11:06 left in the game? Probably his mind was a blank.

"I was leaving it up to the Lord," said Biver, whose kick split the uprights as Ron Geels held.

For Zonca, the triple option quarterback who gained 113 yards on the ground Friday, the second half proved to be the big one.

"The coach told me at halftime to get off my butt," said the junior signalcaller, who responded with the key plays that helped wipe out Hersey's 6-0 halftime lead.

"Zonca looked terribly slow in the first half," said Ferguson. "But we made some adjustments in the second half. And the big play was a Texas-right option. He just broke it, he made that fake and he went."

Zonca followed his blockers and raced 55 yards down the right sideline, finally shoved out of bounds by Hersey's Roger Urban at the Huskie 36.

"The whole right side of the line blocked great," said Zonca. "And (Scott) Mielke threw a good block, too."

Mielke, who contributed 32 yards rushing, picked up a couple of key first downs late in the game when Schaumburg was trying to kill the clock.

Fullback Tom Martino managed 20 yards on the ground, but the senior letterman made his major contribution on defense, where he and his teammates have sparked all season.

"Boy, we were expecting them to pass more than they did," Martino said.

It was Martino who, along with Scott Scholz and Bob Viviano, halted Hersey fullback Jeff Forster on a fourth-down pitchout at the Saxon three-yard line. Hersey passed up a field goal attempt, electing to go to their top ground gainer

Roger Biver

Instead, and Schaumburg wrapped him up less than a yard short of the first down.

"That was the turning point right there," said Ferguson.

The Saxons then began their 55-yard drive for the winning touchdown, scored appropriately by Zonca on a five-yard burst.

It was left to the Schaumburg defense to protect the slim one-point edge. And they did it with relish. Bob Jones batted a pass into the face of Hersey quarterback Scott Topczewski. Jeff Boji broke through and nailed Jeff Forster on an important third-down draw play. And with 4:10 left in the game, the rugged Saxon front line forced a Forster fumble and Scholz came up with the ball for Schaumburg.

Ferguson was glad to see the Huskies run the ball as much as they did, especially since the Saxon coach felt his boys might be vulnerable to the air attack.

"We were hoping they would run," said Ferguson. "We're tough against the run — we bend but we always make the big play."

The Saxons have relied on the big play all season, on both offense and defense, and their Super Bowl victory was no exception.

"We're number one!" the Saxons continued to shout as the team bus rolled onto the street.

Ferguson and his champions enjoyed their bus ride home.

Disappointment for Fremd in state cross country meet

by ART MUGALIAN
Cross Country Editor

Bloom high School rules the state's cross country field after the Trojans defeated York and Fremd in the Illinois state meet held in Peoria Saturday.

In one of the closest finishes in state meet history, Bloom garnered 91 points, three-time defending champion York had 96, and pre-meet favorite Fremd collected 108. The last time the championship runoff was as close was in the 1967 when Arlington edged Proviso West by a single point.

Bloom's title hopes had been pinned on the performance of coach Don Slot's tight-running pack, and the Trojan harriers didn't buckle under the pressure as they produced a 25-second split. With Leo Lenting and Dave Carrizales finishing fourth and eighth in the team ranks, Bloom nipped Joe Newton's York Dukes, who were trying for their seventh cross country title since 1962.

The individual winner was Proviso West's Tom Martino, a senior, who traversed the flat three-mile course in 14:14.3, 24 seconds off the course record held by Craig Virginia. York's Ram Craker was second, six seconds behind, and Dan Glickrist of Rockford East was third. Both Craker and Glickrist are juniors.

Maine West's Joe Paul ran 18th overall in 14:48 and Conant's Mark Kaufman came home 66th in 15:16.

Fourth place in the team standings went to Proviso West (141), just ahead of fifth-place DeKalb (155) and well in front of sixth-place Maine East (206).

Bloom and Fremd had each come into the meet undefeated in 1974 and each had hopes of knocking off perennial power York. Bloom's harriers were the gritty bunch that came away with the win.

"If you look at the results you can see that it was there for us but we didn't take it," said Fremd coach Ray Mealey. "Bloom and York ran as well as they could, but we still could have won it. Only one of our boys ran as well as he could have — and that was the sophafter three plays and kicked. Hersey came back with another long drive, this one eating up 81 yards in a dozen plays down to the Schaumburg three. The Huskies had chalked up a first down at the 12 on Topczewski's 18-yard sling to Carey but they moved only nine more yards on the next four tries and turned control back to the Saxons.

Thus began a 97-yard thrust to the Huskie end zone. Zonca picked up five on a broken play and two more up to the ten before taking off on his 55-yard jaunt down the right sidelines. He was finally pulled down from behind by Roger Urban at the host's 35-yard stripe.

Hersey held firm on the next three plays, but on fourth down Zonca resorted to the quarterback draw, and with great second effort he picked up the needed seven yards for a new set of downs. Two subsequent pitchouts closed the period with the ball resting at the Hersey 15.

To open the fourth quarter it was first Mike Christy lugging for four, then Scott Mielke plowing six more yards, and then Zonca springing off to the right sideline and angling in at the corner to score from five yards out.

With the clock stopped at 11:06, Biver came in and did his thing, splitting the uprights and propelling the Saxons to their eighth triumph in nine games this fall.

On three later occasions in the final quarter Hersey came into control of the ball only to see their offense scuffed out. A fumble recovery by Scott Scholz discouraged one of those attacks and a penalty and two incomplete passes prompted a punting situation on the third effort.

Hersey's defense had dug in to regain possession quickly the first two times but after yielding back to Schaumburg a third time the hosts were left with no time outs and Zonca and company simply ran out the clock.

ECSTATIC SCHAUMBURG SAXONS celebrate their Super Bowl victory over Hersey Friday night as head coach Bob Ferguson, in the dark shirt, takes time to embrace assistant coach Joe Keenan. For the Schaumburg coaching staff, the 7-6 win was the perfect climax to the Mid-Suburban League season. Now the Saxons, in only their fourth year of varsity football, take their 8-1 record into the state football playoffs.

RENEWING THE OPTION. Schaumburg quarterback Russ Zonca took matters into his own capable hands Friday night in the Super Bowl at Hersey, running the quarterback option keeper to perfection. Following several key blocks, the junior signalcaller broke the game

open with a 55-yard scamper late in the third quarter and he put Schaumburg on the scoreboard a moment later with a five-yard run. Roger Biver gave the Saxons the winning margin when his extra-point kick made the score 7-6. (Photo by Dave Tongel)

TUMBLING FINISH. As Lane Tech's Mike Hormann (29) and Fremd's John Filosa near the finish of the state cross country meet in Peoria, a collision occurs behind them. Mark Johnson of Mahomet, still on his feet, and Kurt Kleinow of Willowbrook, on the ground, bumped shoulders and both went sprawling. Johnson regained his feet immediately and finished 13th behind Hormann, but Kleinow was passed by in the confusion and came in 76th. Bloom's harriers won the state meet at Detweiler Park Saturday and Fremd was third. (Photo by Al Messerschmidt)

'Only a point...point is as big as a mile'

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Joe Gliwa gathered his Hersey Huskies around him in the lockerroom, in that dull span of time after a losing football game, when nothing much has really sunk in and thinking about the football game that has just ended is the last thing anybody wants to do.

Joe Gliwa gathered his team around him and talked to them in his hoarse drill instructor cadence that was faintly incongruous used on this exhausted and strangely childlike group of young men.

"I want everybody up here in front," Gliwa shouted. "I want to talk to all of you."

The faces of Hersey's football team were smeared with lamp-black, to cut the glare of the lights and mud, and looks of disappointment that varied in intensity depending on how much the player had had to do with the outcome.

Some had played better than others, some had not set foot on the field in anger all night. Still others had taken out their frustrations after the game by jostling the celebrant Schaumburg fans as they trespassed victoriously on Hersey's field.

Individually they expressed their disgust for themselves, but as a team they had lost, to Schaumburg, in the Super Bowl, 7-6.

"I want everybody to get their heads up," Gliwa was saying. "Everybody sit up here where I can see you. If you can win with us then you can lose with us, too."

Gliwa made a motion with his hands, like calling time out. "That's what the essence of a team is. Sticking together. Don't be a good loser though. Always, always be a sore loser."

"Because if you're a sore loser then you won't become complacent. You won't become complacent about losing and you won't become complacent in life."

That is one of the things that strikes you about Gliwa. All that he teaches has a purpose beyond the scope of a football season. Gliwa realizes he can give his teams something beyond the tenuous and fleeting thrill of a championship.

"We only lost this game by a point," Gliwa continued. "But a point is as big as a mile. You've been beaten but there are a lot of things you can be proud of."

"I've had some of you here for four years and I hope you've learned something in that time."

"I want all of you to know that if you ever need anything you can always come back here and we'll help you. We care about each and every one of you and you can count on us."

Then for a moment Gliwa shifted to the less inspirational chores of coaching.

"Now I'll be here tomorrow morning and I want you to come in and return your equipment. I'd appreciate it if we wouldn't have any theft because it's a pain in the neck to go around and try to track down missing equipment."

"I know a lot of you are going out for sports this winter. You'll be starting Monday and some of you may start tomorrow. Try to remember some of the things we've taught you here."

"There'll be an awards banquet and I'd like all of you to come and pick up your awards."

Then for a moment Gliwa was silent. A manager standing behind him quietly tore down a long paper banner proclaiming Hersey superiority.

"I can't think of anything else to say. But before any of you walk out that door tonight I want everyone to stop by the

Rolling Meadows shopping center shakes off big malls' effects

by NANCY COWGER

When the Woodfield Shopping Center opened three years ago, people wondered how places like the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center would survive.

Businessmen in the small shopping center at Kirchhoff Road and Meadow Drive in Rolling Meadows admittedly were worried and prepared for the worst — and at first that is exactly what happened. Some business dropped as much as 25 per cent in sales.

But three years later the economic picture is brighter at the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center and merchants report an economic upturn.

Stanley Herman, owner of Jeans and Jeans store and president of the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center Assn., says he has doubled his sales volume and expanded his business since Woodfield's opening three years ago.

Sales at The Crawford, the Rolling Meadows department store, also have more than doubled according to company officials, even with competition from four department stores at Woodfield that could almost fit Crawford's in their storage space.

ALTHOUGH THE Woodfield opening hit local merchants hard the effects didn't last as long as from the opening of the Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect.

Announcement of plans for Randhurst and Woodfield both caused tremors in the 19-year-old Rolling Meadows center. "Our reaction was concern, but less concern with Randhurst than with Woodfield," said Alan Garber, president of Crawford's.

Randhurst is 4½ miles from the Rolling Meadows mall, and the road network connecting the two is not particularly good, Garber said. It also was the first enclosed mall in the area — no one knew just what to expect.

What happened was a plateau. "I don't think the percentage decline (in sales) was significant, but the growth stopped," Garber said. "The novelty of Randhurst was immense," he said. Growth didn't really show its face again for about a year.

Woodfield "was like somebody dropping a bucket of cold water on you," Garber said. The drenching was not unexpected. In 1971, shoppers had developed new habits, he said. "People then were willing to drive 10 miles to shop — they wouldn't do that 15 years ago," he said. And they didn't have to drive far at all to get to Woodfield — only about 1½ miles on a well-developed road system.

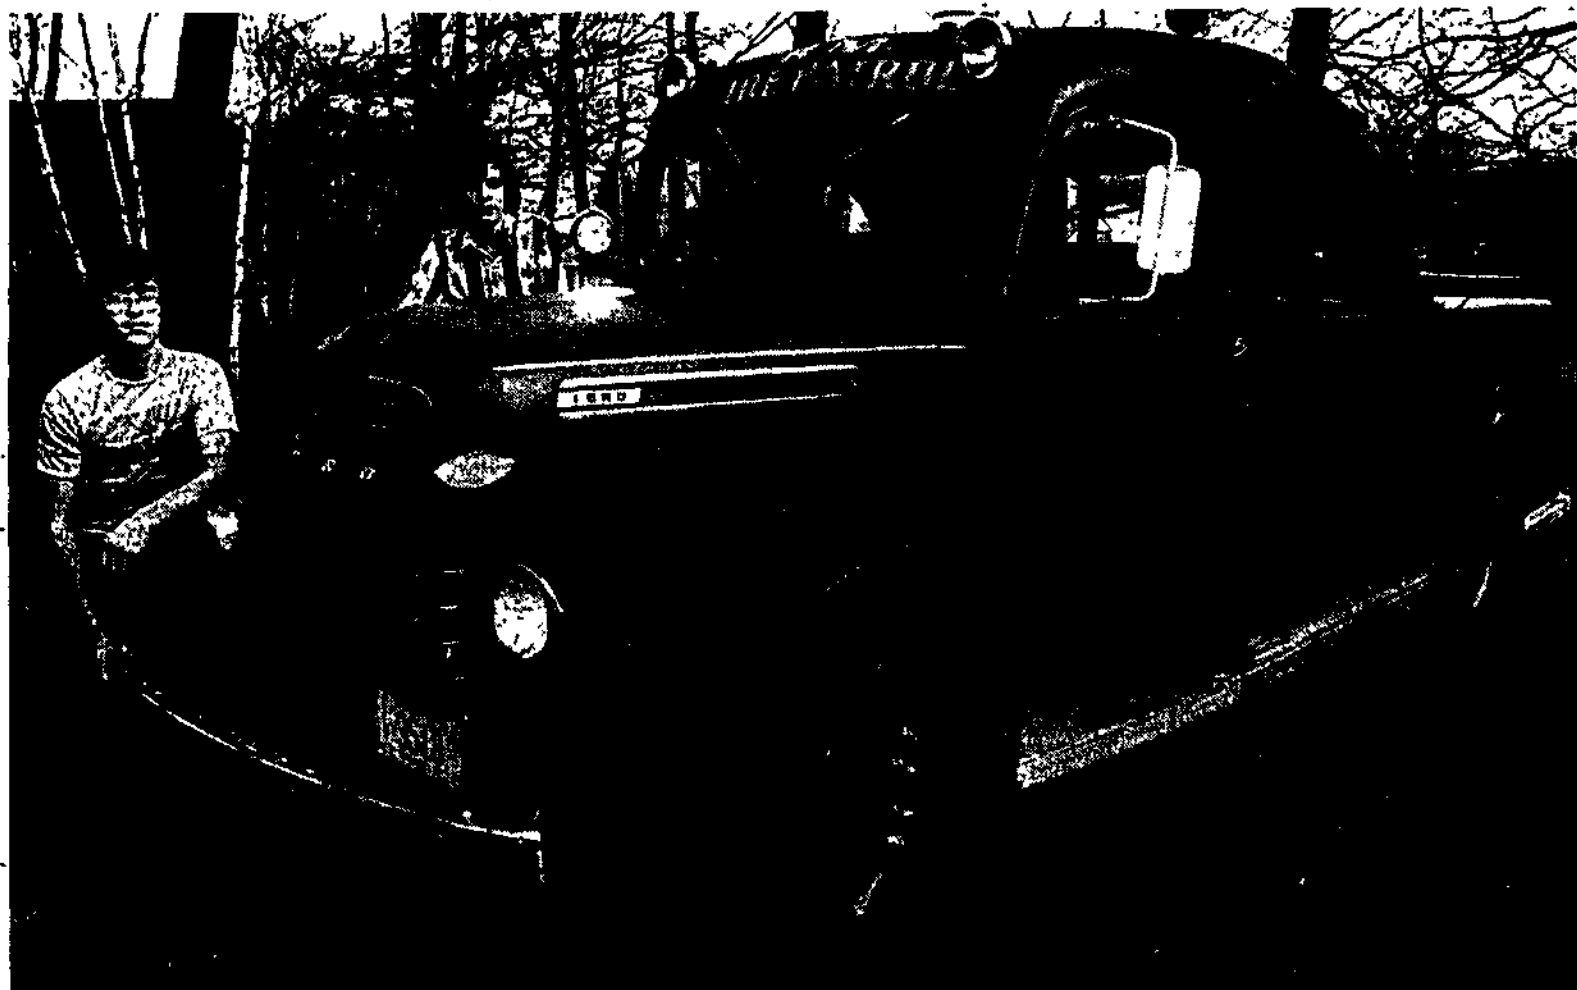

"Woodfield was under construction when we came in," Herman said. It opened a year after his store did. "I expected business to drop considerably, and that it would slowly come back. I expected about a 20 per cent drop," he said.

ALTHOUGH CRAWFORD'S experienced a decline of 20 to 25 per cent, at Jeans & Jeans "it went down less than 10 per cent and came back up quicker" than Herman expected.

When eight months had passed, most Rolling Meadows merchants had exceeded their pre-Woodfield sales, Herman said.

Herman concedes the Woodfield stores are "nicer" than his and they cater to a larger crowd of shoppers, and need more merchandise of each style, color and size than he does. Most of his customers

Arlington Park asks to schedule 120 racing days

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track Pres. John F. Loomer has asked the Illinois Racing Board for 120 days of racing at Arlington Park next year, from June 2 to Oct. 18.

Arlington Park regularly asks for 120 racing days each year when the racing board considers date allocations. However the application is not in any way binding on the board which can assign any dates it wants to the various state racing associations.

The racing board will hold hearings on the 1975 schedule Nov. 20-22 in Chicago. The date it will consider Arlington Park's application has not yet been set.

This year, Arlington Park had 84 days of racing from June 3 to Sept. 7. The meeting was one of the most lucrative in Illinois history, a fact Loomer is likely to point to when he appears before the board.

Wagering this summer at Arlington Park increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 season, and attendance was up 18 per cent. A total of 1,215,333 persons wagered $137,543,902.

ARLINGTON PARK'S application includes 60 days for Arlington Park and 60 days for Washington Park Race Track, with all the racing to be held at Arlington Park. Loomer is president of both race tracks. Both are owned by Madison Square Garden Corp.

In his presentation to the racing board a year ago, Loomer warned that another bad year of racing at Arlington Park this summer could lead the race track's owners to question whether the track should remain open.

Illinois horse racing, he said last year, was "at the crossroads."

After the public hearings later this month, the racing board is required by law to announce the 1975 schedule no later than Jan. 1. Summer dates, including those requested by Arlington Park, are the most profitable and keenly contested racing days.

4th version of murder role expected

Helton to take witness stand today

by JOE SWICKARD

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the murder of an Arlington Heights gas station manager five years ago.

Helton, 22, is charged with the slaying of Fred J. Tallon, the 64-year-old night manager of the Arlington Park Shell service station, Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue, in the predawn hours of Nov. 11, 1969.

The bench trial, entering its fourth day before Circuit Court Judge Jacques F. Heilingoetter at the Civic Center, already has heard, through written statements and video tapes, Helton giving three conflicting stories of his role in the fatal stabbing of Tallon.

Two policemen called as defense witnesses, testified Friday that Helton was allowed to leave jail the day after his arrest for a holiday meal with his family and that they each took him to their homes after he was charged with murder. They also said Helton was given money by the Arlington Heights police chief while he was expected to be a prosecution witness.

A VIDEO TAPE of Helton's third version of the crime was played Friday in court. In it the then 17-year-old defendant named James Ales as the killer who pursued Tallon across Wilke Road. Helton told how Ales pushed the victim through the gas station window after first stabbing him to prevent a phone call for help. Ales then repeatedly stabbed Tallon in his futile struggles and flight to escape, Helton said.

The tape, taken on Dec. 31, 1969 at the Arlington Heights police station, is in direct conflict with tapes made Dec. 28 and Dec. 27 while Helton was being held in the Du Page County jail on other charges.

In the first written statement and taped account, Helton said Raymond Katzensky was the killer and that Katzensky had related the story to him as "pointers" on how to commit a robbery and a sure method of stabbing someone to death.

The next day Helton changed his story, saying he accompanied Katzensky on the crime but was unaware that his alleged partner was armed. He further said he was prevented from intervening by another member of the robbery team, Robert Fucini, who held him at bay with a pistol.

IN THE THIRD version, Katzensky was dropped entirely and replaced with a James Lewetke, who Helton said waited in the car.

In this version, Ales rifled the victim's pockets of money and took his wedding band before returning to the station to clean out the cash register, Helton said. Again, Helton said, Fucini covered him with a pistol and the killer pointed the weapon at him and called him "nothing but a chicken."

Helton recounted how the alleged killer wiped the knife with a rag and then passed around Tallon's wedding band. Everyone in the car tried on the ring, Helton said.

"They passed it around. And mine was the only one it would go down on," Helton said on the tape demonstrating slipping the ring over his knuckle.

He said he did not get a share of the $87 reported stolen because "I turned chicken on them."

On the tape he was asked why he again was changing his story. Helton answered that he had been threatened by Ales. He said Ales, also being held at the Du Page County jail, passed the word through other prisoners that he would be killed if he talked.

ASKED WHY he had named Katzensky in earlier versions, Helton said it was Ales' plan. "Jim was using him as a sucker . . . use him as a sucker all the way through."

Katzensky and Fucini were arrested in Georgia while Helton and Ales traveled to Florida and back, a trip financed by robbing motels. Ales and Helton were arrested in Du Page County on other charges when they returned in late December, 1969.

After playing the third tape, Asst. State's Atty. Lee Hettinger rested the prosecution and defense Attorney Melvin Karmm moved for a directed acquittal of Helton. Heilingoetter denied the motion.

LT. GEORGE EKBLAD, who already had appeared for the prosecution, then testified that neither he nor other members of the police prompted, coached or induced Helton in his statements of December 1969. He said he "never" offered the defendant rewards in exchange for his cooperation.

Ekblad denied the defense contention that Helton was kept in an unlocked cell and was paid to perform chores around the station.

However, the 15-year police veteran testified that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood, and that he (Ekblad) took Helton to his home on at least one occasion. Helton also was allowed to go with his family on a holiday meal, the day after he was charged with murder, but that he was escorted by two detectives at the time, Ekblad said.

Helton remained in Arlington Heights rather than being transferred to the County jail, because Ekblad said he "understood" the State's Attorney's office had gotten a stay of transfer order because Helton, at that time, was going to be a witness for the prosecution.

UNDER CROSS-examination, Ekblad said that both Helton and his parents were glad that he was not taken to the County Jail.

Det. Gene Deck, the second defense witness, also testified Helton was not given favors nor worked for a salary around the police station. However, Deck said he also took Helton to his home "once that I can recall."

Deck said Helton remained in the Arlington Heights lockup because there "was no room for him in the county (jail) witness area."

Helton will be called upon today as the last witness to give his version of his treatment and status while in jail and his part, if any, in the five-year-old crime.

Elk Grove girl, 10, shot to death

A 10-year-old Elk Grove Village girl was shot to death in her home Sunday afternoon and a 13-year-old boy was taken into custody in the shooting. Elk Grove Village police, who refused to identify the girl or the boy, said the two were alone in the home at the time of the shooting. The girl was pronounced dead at the scene by her family doctor and her body was taken to county morgue. Police said the boy was taken to the Audy Home Sunday night and information in the shooting would be presented today to the state's attorney's office. Police refused to provide any further information.

Parents seek bus safety

Parents in Des Plaines are organizing a campaign to demand yellow school bus transportation for youngsters in Des Plaines Dist. 62 schools. Children currently ride United Motor Coach Co. buses, which are not subject to stricter yellow school bus regulations. A 12-year-old boy suffered bruises and scrapes on his legs Friday when the bus pulled away while he was getting off through a rear door. The driver, William J. Raddseich, was charged with leaving the scene of an accident. One of the women organizing the yellow-bus campaign said: "Our children are important. Why can't we have safe buses?"

Elk Grove principal dies

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington. He had been principal since 1967 and had previously held administrative posts at Forest View and Prospect high schools. A memorial service will be held at Elk Grove High School at 10 a.m. Wednesday and school classes will be suspended that day.

Stavros-linked firm hired

Country Service and Supply Co., a firm linked to convicted political boss James Stavros, has been hired to excavate a parking lot at the Wheeling Village Hall. Village Mgr. George Passol said the Northbrook firm "was the only one we could get." He estimated the work would cost $1,000 and said he saw nothing wrong with hiring the firm. Stavros, who is serving a four-year federal prison term, has admitted working for Country Service. The company's president also has pleaded guilty to taking part in the $40,000 shakedown of a Wheeling developer by Stavros.

Free textbooks approved

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 voters Saturday overwhelmingly approved a referendum calling for elimination of textbook fees. The 1,418 to 153 vote means the district will pick up the cost of books instead of renting them to parents at a charge of $3.50 a year for kindergartners and $7.50 a year for first through eighth grades.

Kiwanians may be dropped

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of the Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark. Rather than revoke the local club's charter, said Maurice Myerson, Kiwanis lieutenant governor for this area, the Kiwanis International is more likely to drop members who stand behind Miss Clark. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law," Myerson said, referring to the Kiwanis no-women rule. "There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law."

Helton to take stand today

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the 1969 slaying of an Arlington Heights service station manager during a robbery. Videotapes of three varying 1969 accounts by Helton of the robbery and murder were played in court Friday. Two Arlington Heights policemen called as defense witnesses also testified that Helton visited their homes while he was in police custody and that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood.

Young and Mikva withdraw unfair campaign charges

by STEVE BROWN

U.S. Rep. Samuel H. Young, R-10th, and his Democratic opponent, Abner J. Mikva, withdrew unfair campaign practices charges against each other Sunday after a three-man arbitration panel heard arguments for more than 28 hours. In a joint statement, the candidates said the dispute could not be resolved and continuation of the hearing would serve no useful purpose.

Charges were filed last month with the Fair Campaign Practices Committee generally alleging each misrepresented his opponent's views in his campaign literature.

Young filed his complaint first, on Oct. 22. Mikva responded and also entered a counterclaim, charging misrepresentation by Young.

The final action of Sunday's arbitration session apparently surprised supporters of both candidates. The session, which was conducted in Chicago by the Midwest chapter of the American Arbitration Assn., began at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

Both candidates and their aides attended portions of the session, which ran through the night. The hearing was closed to the press.

Samuel H. Young

Abner Mikva

In their statement, the candidates said, "It now appears that the hearing cannot be completed before Tuesday's election and continuation of the hearing can serve no useful purpose."

The statement also noted that findings of the hearing could probably not be conveyed to the voters before the election. The three-man arbitration panel consisted of Samuel C. Thompson, Granger Cook and Richard A. Giangiorli.

Young's supporters indicated they felt the hearing was worthwhile even though their candidate missed several campaign appearances and the matter was not resolved.

They labeled the session the "first political arbitration of its kind in the nation."

Besides the misrepresentation charges, Young also said he believed Mikva's allegations charging him with a conflict of interest in regard to several congressional votes were not violations of any House rules.

Mikva had charged that Young misstated Mikva's views on several issues, including busing and gun control, to the voters of the 10th District.

Stable hand death 'undetermined'

A coroner's jury ruled Friday that circumstances surrounding the death of a man beaten at Arlington Park during the summer were undetermined after witnesses failed to appear for testimony.

Evidence in the death of John H. Walker, 51, of Covina, Calif., will be presented to a Cook County grand jury Thursday.

Murder charges have been filed against Stanley Woods, a former employee at the race track. Woods still is at large.

Walker died in a Berwyn hospital after he suffered blows to the head during a fight July 31 at Arlington Park, where he and Woods were employed as stable hands.

Woods and John Cochran reportedly told police they found Walker unconscious in the race track parking lot and put him in his car thinking him to be intoxicated. They reportedly said when they returned to the car in the afternoon, Walker was still unconscious and that they decided to drive him to Hawthorne Park in Cicero, where his wife worked.

Woods was taken to MacNeal Memorial Hospital, where he died Aug. 15. Woods and Cochran have been charged with auto theft for allegedly stealing Walker's car.

Rolling Meadows Shopping Center merchants say they have recovered from the loss of patrons to the Woodfield Shopping Center.

Shop center shakes off big malls' effects

come to shop, while many Woodfield patrons are there to see the sights. Herman thinks Woodfield has "made us more responsive to our customers so we can keep them."

Crawford's took the initiative in battling Woodfield. The store eliminated its lowest price ranges when Topps Department store opened across Kirchoff Road. Until then, it had served all price ranges, said Garber.

To meet Woodfield's department stores headon, Crawford's management elim-nated some departments completely, and expanded the building. Garber said individual clothing departments in the Rolling Meadows store "compete in size and merchandise" with the same departments in Woodfield stores.

BUT CRAWFORD's is not Sears, Roebuck and Co., and the Rolling Meadows mall is not Woodfield. The differences have kept Rolling Meadows' center going, the merchants said.

Shoppers can park at Rolling Meadows' center with little problem while Woodfield's size makes a large parking lot necessary, and the walk from car to mall long. Once inside Woodfield, the shopper still must find the store he wants, Garber said, who feels "no matter how often you shop there, there is an orientation problem."

Convenience is crucial, and "we overwhelm customers in that area," said Garber.

Woodfield provides "quasi-social experiences," Garber said. He and other Rolling Meadows merchants don't try to compete in that respect. They exist to sell, and Garber said they have a much higher percentage of buying customers than Woodfield.

WITHOUT THE shopping center association, the merchants say some of them might not be in business at all. The association provides group advertising, giving each member a "bigger bang for his buck." The center uses both newspaper and radio advertising. Its clientele very nearly coincides with the circulation of the newspapers that carry the ads, Garber said.

And the association is the vehicle carrying the center into the city, not letting it just be there, but helping it be a community focal point. Senior citizens sold handcraft products in the small mall a week ago. Last week, displays from elementary students throughout Dist. 15 greeted visitors. The mall is as much a part of Halloween in Rolling Meadows as any ghost or goblin, with pumpkin-carving and window-painting contests and the sale of candy coupons. Next spring will see a repeat of the art displays school students presented last spring when the mall provided them a "gallery" they might not otherwise have had.

Robert Haskell

High school principal dies while hunting

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington.

Haskell, principal of the high school since 1967, had been hunting with two of his four sons when he suffered the fatal heart attack about 9 a.m. Sunday.

A memorial service will be held at the high school, Arlington Heights Road and Elk Grove Boulevard, at 10 a.m. Wednesday. High school classes will be suspended that day, said Roderick C. McLennan, assistant superintendent for instruction of High School Dist. 214.

"BOB HASKELL has been in the school system for many years. He was elevated to principal because of his proven abilities," McLennan said. "He was well liked by the students and the staff. He will be missed as a very fine human being and as an excellent administrator."

Before being assigned as principal at Elk Grove High School, Haskell was an assistant principal for instructional services at Forest View High School for three years and was acting assistant principal at Prospect High School for a year. Haskell also served as a social science teacher and athletic trainer at Prospect.

In addition, he was treasurer of the Elk Grove Kiwanis Club, a member of the Elk Grove Community Services Board and president of the Mid-Suburban Board of Controls. He served three years in the U.S. Army during World War II, earning a bronze star award.

HASKELL, 299 BARNBURY Ave., Elk Grove Village, is survived by his widow, Evelyn M. Haskell, nee Varner; four sons, Robert E. of Roselle, Edward A. of Elk Grove Village, James M. of Arlington Heights and Ronald T. of Elk Grove Village; sister, Anita Oestmann of Chicago Heights; and mother, Beale Haskell of Chicago Heights. He was a former Mount Prospect resident.

Visitation will be from 6 to 8:30 p.m. today at the Hub Funeral Chapel, 1301 Otto Blvd., Chicago Heights, and from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at Friedrichs Funeral Home, 320 W. Central Rd., Mount Prospect. There will be a 10 a.m. Wednesday service at Elk Grove High School, followed by burial at Skyline Memorial Park, Monee.

Police probe needle in Halloween candy

Elk Grove Village police are investigating a report Friday that a sewing needle was placed in a child's candy bar which was collected during trick-or-treating.

Joanne Hauser, 210 Brookhaven Dr., told police she had found a needle in a candy bar received by her son, Jimmy, 8, on Thursday. Mrs. Hauser said she did not know who might be responsible for placing the object in the candy because her son had collected three other similar candy bars in a Halloween route through the neighborhood.

Village studies request

Palatine cab fare may rise

A request by Martin Cab Co. to boost taxi rates in Palatine while providing reduced fares for senior citizens will be considered tonight by village officials.

A joint meeting of the administration, finance and legislation committee and health, safety and welfare committee of the village is set for 8 p.m. at the Glade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Glade St., to discuss the proposed fare increase for Martin Cab Co.

Richard Vana, Palatine manager for the cab company, has asked the board to approve a 20-cent per mile increase in fares and a 10-cent increase in the base price of taxi rides. Approval of the request would raise taxi fares from 50 to 70 cents per mile and the base price from 60 to 70 cents.

If the rate hikes are approved, Martin Cab plans to drop its 20 per cent overtime-meter cost for fares outside the village limits. The cost of multiple load fares also would be reduced.

Senior citizens would not be affected by the fare increase if a second proposal from Martin Cab Co. is approved.

The proposed senior citizen program calls for the firm to transport senior citizens anywhere within the village for a flat rate of $1.50, of which the senior citizen would pay 50 cents and the village $1.

Similar senior citizen programs operate in Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Park Ridge. Arlington Heights has approved a senior citizen taxi program but is waiting for a $15,000 federal grant before it begins.

Decision expected Saturday

Kiwanis backers of woman face ouster

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark.

The continuing controversy could be decided Saturday at the next meeting of the club, which has been threatened with loss of its charter by Kiwanis International.

The Kiwanis official, Maurice Myerson, lieutenant governor for the area district, believed the Elk Grove club would not lose its charter. He said he considered it more likely, instead, that members who choose to continue to back Miss Clark will be dropped from the Kiwanis membership rolls.

A majority of members of the local club voted to defy the order to oust Miss Clark, but Myerson said the vote did not reflect the sentiments of the entire club.

"There are too many members who have indicated they want to remain Kiwanians," Myerson told The Herald. "The club will probably lose some members who just don't want to abide by the Kiwanis constitution, which bars women from joining."

MISS CLARK was asked to join the club last February when her name was included in a bulk mailing. Her application and membership were processed through the International organization and approved without problems.

When the international became aware of its error, the local club was ordered to remove Miss Clark.

Myerson said he objects to the bad image he said the international has gotten because of the publicity surrounding the order.

"Every man who wears the 'K' is a member of Kiwanis International. It's not some mystical group pulling strings," he said. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law. There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law. They broke their own by-laws."

RICHARD HARRELL, president of the Elk Grove chapter, said the club will continue to discuss its options in view of an order by the international to drop Miss Clark from its roster or lose its charter.

Harrell declined to comment on the options that are open to the local chapter.

Two township youths nabbed

Two Palatine Township youths were arrested by Palatine police in connection with a purse-snatching incident Saturday in which an elderly woman suffered a broken finger at the Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

Schaumburg police charged Jeffrey Henderson, 17, whose last known address was 1502 Northwest Hwy., and a 15-year-old youth with robbery. Henderson was charged by Palatine police with auto theft after the pair were stopped while traveling in a truck believed stolen Thursday night from Palatine.

Schaumburg police put out a description of the stolen vehicle, and Palatine Patrolman Stan Rajski stopped truck matching the description at the Willow Creek apartment complex about 35 minutes after the incident, police said.

Schaumburg police reported that a purse containing $60 in cash was wrestled from Ragna Moe, 62, Chicago, while at the parking lot near Marshall Field & Co. Mrs. Moe was knocked down and suffered a broken finger.

She was released after emergency treatment at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

Henderson was being held by Palatine police in lieu of $15,000 bond. The 15-year-old was transferred to the Cook County Juvenile Detention Center in Chicago.

Taxi rate hike request goes before village

A request by Martin Cab Co. to boost taxi rates in Palatine while providing reduced fares for senior citizens will be considered tonight by village officials.

A joint meeting of the administration, finance and legislation committee and health, safety and welfare committee of the village is set for 8 p.m. at the Slide Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slide St., to discuss the proposed fare increase for Martin Cab Co.

Richard Vana, Palatine manager for the cab company, has asked the board to approve a 20-cent per mile increase in fares and a 10-cent increase in the base price of taxi rides. Approval of the request would raise taxi fares from 50 to 70 cents per mile and the base price from 60 to 70 cents.

If the rate hikes are approved, Martin Cab plans to drop its 20 per cent over-the-meter cost for fares outside the village limits. The cost of multiple load fares also would be reduced.

Senior citizens would not be affected by the fare increase if a second proposal from Martin Cab Co. is approved.

The proposed senior citizen program calls for the firm to transport senior citizens anywhere within the village for a flat rate of $1.50, of which the senior citizen would pay .50 cents and the village $1.

Similar senior citizen programs operate in Des Plaines, Mount Prospect and Park Ridge. Arlington Heights has approved a senior citizen taxi program but is waiting for a $15,000 federal grant before it begins.

$7,000 collected for Mercy drive

The Palatine Crusade of Mercy has collected one-third of its $21,000 goal during the first month of the campaign.

The $7,000 in contributions has come mainly from homeowners, said Dobby Dobkin, chairman of the Palatine crusade. Business and industry pledges are just starting to come in and pledge cards were distributed in the schools last week. "I am very optimistic," said Dobkin. "I feel we will even go over our quota."

Dobkin added that money collected in the village, even that exceeding the quota, stays in Palatine to help local charities. Last year the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy gave $2.66 for every $1 collected locally.

A videotape featuring three of the organizations the Crusade of Mercy contributes money to has been prepared by students at Palatine Hills Junior High School.

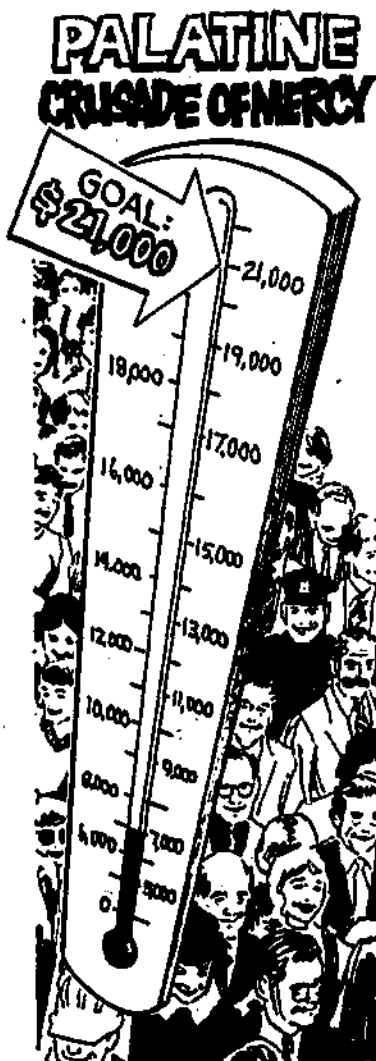

"The tape really brings home the point of people helping people right here in Palatine," said Dobkin. Arrangements are being made to show the tape in one of the local banks and it also is available for local service groups.

Local organizations receiving Crusade of Mercy funds are Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Countrywide Center, United Servicemen's Organization, Salvation Army welfare fund and community service, Homemakers, Santa Teresita Church day care center, Northwest Mental Health, Clearbrook Center and Camp Reinberg.

AN OLD 1947 Rolling Meadows fire truck has been keeping Tony, 18, and Mike Locascio, 16, busy in their spare time. The brothers bought the truck for $1 from William Fremd High School and have been working on it at their home, 302 E. Shady Dr., Palatine. The truck runs fine now and as soon as it gets a paint job and some body work, the brothers hope to enter the truck in parades.

4th version of murder role expected

Helton to take witness stand today

by JOE SWICKARD

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the murder of an Arlington Heights gas station manager five years ago.

Helton, 22, is charged with the slaying of Fred J. Tallon, the 64-year-old night manager of the Arlington-Park Shell service station, Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue, in the predawn hours of Nov. 11, 1969.

The bench trial, entering its fourth day before Circuit Court Judge Jacques F. Hellingoetter at the Civic Center, already has heard, through written statements and video tapes, Helton giving three conflicting stories of his role in the fatal stabbing of Tallon.

Two policemen called as defense witnesses, testified Friday that Helton was allowed to leave jail the day after his arrest for a holiday meal with his family and that they each took him to their homes after he was charged with murder. They also said Helton was given money by the Arlington Heights police chief while he was expected to be a prosecution witness.

A VIDEO TAPE of Helton's third version of the crime was played Friday in court. In it the then 17-year-old defendant named James Ales as the killer who pursued Tallon across Wilke Road. Helton told how Ales pushed the victim through the gas station window after first stabbing him to prevent a phone call for help. Ales then repeatedly stabbed Tallon in his futile struggles and flight to escape, Helton said.

The tape, taken on Dec. 31, 1969 at the Arlington Heights police station, is in direct conflict with tapes made Dec. 26 and Dec. 27 while Helton was being held in the Du Page County jail on other charges.

In the first written statement and taped account, Helton said Raymond Katzensky was the killer and that Katzensky had related the story to him as "pointers" on how to commit a robbery and a sure method of stabbing someone to death.

The next day Helton changed his story, saying he accompanied Katzensky on the crime but was unaware that his alleged partner was armed. He further said he was prevented from intervening by another member of the robbery team, Robert Fucini, who held him at bay with a pistol.

IN THE THIRD version, Katzensky was dropped entirely and replaced with a James Lewecke, who Helton said waited in the car.

In this version, Ales rifled the victim's pockets of money and took his wedding band before returning to the station to clean out the cash register, Helton said. Again, Helton said, Fucini covered him with a pistol and the killer pointed the weapon at him and called him "nothing but a chicken."

Helton recounted how the alleged killer wiped the knife with a rag and then passed around Tallon's wedding band. Everyone in the car tried on the ring, Helton said.

"They passed it around. And mine was the only one it would go down on," Helton said on the tape demonstrating slipping the ring over his knuckle.

He said he did not get a share of the $87 reported stolen because "I turned chicken on them."

On the tape he was asked why he again was changing his story, Helton answered that he had been threatened by Ales. He said Ales, also being held at the Du Page County jail, passed the word through other prisoners that he would be killed if he talked.

ASKED WHY he had named Katzensky in earlier versions, Helton said it was Ales' plan. "Jim was using him as a sucker . . . use him as a sucker all the way through."

Katzensky and Fucini were arrested in Georgia while Helton and Ales traveled to Florida and back, a trip financed by robbing motels. Ales and Helton were arrested in Du Page County on other charges when they returned in late December, 1969.

After playing the third tape, Asst. State's Atty. Lee Hettinger rested the prosecution and defense Attorney Melvin Kamm moved for a directed acquittal of Helton. Hellingoetter denied the motion.

LT. GEORGE EKBLAD, who already had appeared for the prosecution, then testified that neither he nor other members of the police prompted, coached or induced Helton in his statements of December 1969. He said he "never" offered the defendant rewards in exchange for his cooperation.

Ekblad denied the defense contention that Helton was kept in an unlocked cell and was paid to perform chores around the station.

However, the 15-year police veteran testified that Helton was given "cigarette money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood, and that he (Ekblad) took Helton to his home on at least one occasion. Helton also was allowed to go with his family on a holiday meal, the day after he was charged with murder, but that he was escorted by two detectives at the time, Ekblad said.

Helton remained in Arlington Heights rather than being transferred to the County jail, because Ekblad said he "understood" the State's Attorney's office had gotten a stay of transfer order because Helton, at that time, was going to be a witness for the prosecution.

UNDER CROSS-examination, Ekblad said that both Helton and his parents were glad that he was not taken to the County Jail.

Det. Gene Deck, the second defense witness, also testified Helton was not given favors nor worked for a salary around the police station. However, Deck said he also took Helton to his home "once that I can recall."

Deck said Helton remained in the Arlington Heights lockup because there "was no room for him in the county (jail) witness area."

Helton will be called upon today as the last witness to give his version of his treatment and status while in jail and his part, if any, in the five-year-old crime.

Arlington Park asks 120 racing days

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track Pres. John F. Loomer has asked the Illinois Racing Board for 120 days of racing at Arlington Park next year, from June 2 to Oct. 18. Arlington Park regularly asks for 120 racing days each year when the racing board considers date allocations. However the application is not in any way binding on the board which can assign any dates it wants to the various state racing associations.

The racing board will hold hearings on the 1975 schedule Nov. 20-22 in Chicago. The date it will consider Arlington Park's application has not yet been set.

This year, Arlington Park had 84 days of racing from June 3 to Sept. 7. The meeting was one of the most lucrative in Illinois history, a fact Loomer is likely to point to when he appears before the board.

Wagering this summer at Arlington Park increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 season, and attendance was up 18 per cent. A total of 1,215,333 persons wagered $137,543,902.

ARLINGTON PARK'S application includes 60 days for Arlington Park and 60 days for Washington Park Race Track, with all the racing to be held at Arlington Park. Loomer is president of both race tracks. Both are owned by Madison Square Garden Corp.

In his presentation to the racing board a year ago, Loomer warned that another bad year of racing at Arlington Park this summer could lead the race track's owners to question whether the track should remain open.

Illinois horse racing, he said last year, was "at the crossroads."

After the public hearings later this month, the racing board is required by law to announce the 1975 schedule no later than Jan. 1. Summer dates, including those requested by Arlington Park, are the most profitable and keenly contested racing days.

Two township youths nabbed for purse snatch

Two Palatine Township youths were arrested by Palatine police in connection with a purse-snatching incident Saturday in which an elderly woman suffered a broken finger at the Woodfield Shopping Center in Schaumburg.

Schaumburg police charged Jeffrey Henderson, 17, whose last known address was 1502 Northwest Hwy., and a 15-year-old youth with robbery. Henderson was charged by Palatine police with auto theft after the pair were stopped while traveling in a truck believed stolen Thursday night from Palatine.

Schaumburg police put out a description of the stolen vehicle, and Palatine Patrolman Stan Hajek stopped truck matching the description at the Willow Creek apartment complex about 35 minutes after the incident, police said.

Schaumburg police reported that a purse containing $60 in cash was wrestled from Ragna Moe, 62, Chicago, while at the parking lot near Marshall Field &

Co. Mrs. Moe was knocked down and suffered a broken finger.

She was released after emergency treatment at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

Henderson was being held by Palatine police in lieu of $15,000 bond. The 15-year-old was transferred to the Cook County Juvenile Detention Center in Chicago.

Officials look at amending sign ordinance

by BETTY LEE

Mount Prospect officials are taking a look at the village sign ordinance for possible amendment after protests from several businesses who say the law is vague.

The village sent letters early last month to more than 16 businesses and informed merchants they were violating the law by displaying flags, banners and pennants on rooftops.

"We've had such a reaction that we are holding off any action until we meet and discuss the problem," said William Amundsen, sign inspector and zoning officer. No date has been set for the meeting.

THE ORDINANCE states that no roof sign can be erected in the village. The village has received numerous calls from businessmen who believe that flags and pennants are not signs, but decoration, Amundsen said.

"What would happen if I put up the American flag," said Phillip Topp, manager of the Olson Rug Co., 201 E. Kensington. "They (pennants) add to the place, and make it look nice. I don't see how anyone can object to it."

Amundsen, who was hired as sign inspector a month ago, believes that pennants, flags and banners are considered to be signs under the ordinance.

He quoted the ordinance: "Sign shall mean . . . representations containing words, printing, pictures, designs or combinations thereof used in the nature of advertisement, announcement or directions calculated to attract the attention of the public."

"It is a matter of interpretation," Amundsen said. "But I think these pennants are representations." He added that designs, logos and the names of products represent the stores and attract public attention.

SOME BUSINESSES are complying to the law by taking down the pennants, Amundsen said. An administrative employee of Goldblatt's at the Mount Prospect Plaza said he took down the flags to obey the law. "Mount Prospect is not the only place where there are such ordinances," he said.

Amundsen said many merchants may have invested large sums putting up the pennants. He estimated that a merchant could spend from $500 to $2,000 for a set. "I guess they complained because they feel they spent a lot for nothing," Amundsen said.

Woman hospitalized after rape attempt

A 24-year-old Mount Prospect woman was hospitalized Saturday after an attempted rape in her apartment, police said.

The woman apparently went to Northwest Community Hospital for treatment of injuries suffered in the rape attempt, but did not tell the hospital authorities what had happened, police said. Police were notified of the attack on the woman about 2 p.m. Saturday, although it happened at 12:30 a.m.

Further details were being withheld by police because the case was still under investigation.

Cost to build hospital may increase $2 million

by JOE FRANZ

If construction of the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove branch of Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital does not begin this month the cost could increase by $2 million, a hospital spokesman said.

Norman Davis, a Franklin Boulevard consultant, made the observation in view of renewed speculation over whether the hospital is needed.

Comprehensive Health Planning, a local hospital planning agency that must approve hospital plans, reviewed the Franklin Boulevard plans last week. "I think we made a good presentation, but I'm not sure we convinced them a hospital is needed in the area," said Davis.

Approval by the agency is a prerequisite to receiving Blue Cross-Blue Shield coverage.

"Comprehensive Health Planning is operating under the assumption a hospital is not needed," said Davis. "If you take it from that standpoint, I'm not optimistic."

Davis said the contract for the facility, on the east side of Schoenbeck Road just south of the Wheeling village limits, calls for groundbreaking by Dec. 1. If it is not started the agreement will have to be renegotiated.

"THE CONTRACTOR has informed us that if construction isn't started by then the cost will go up one to one and three-quarters per cent a month," Davis said. "The project will take about 18 months, so that would mean a possible increase of $2 million."

As proposed, the 228-bed facility was expected to cost about $11.3 million, but the delay could push the price over $13 million, Davis said.

Patrick DeMoon, executive director of Franklin Boulevard, recently said he was optimistic Comprehensive Health Planning would approve the plans.

Approval by the agency is uncertain because of a recent report that said there is no need for additional hospitals in Cook County. Robert Davitt of the agency said plans for the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove facility will not be approved unless Franklin Boulevard proves that a need for the hospital exists.

BOTH DeMOON AND Davis said, however, plans for building the hospital will proceed with or without the approval of the agency.

Without approval from Comprehensive Health Planning and a Blue Cross-Blue Shield contract, Franklin Boulevard probably will have difficulty obtaining financing.

A state law allows the hospital to finance part of the construction with general obligation bonds purchased through the county or municipality in order to obtain lower interest rates. Unless the hospital can show financing agencies it has a Blue Cross contract, however, the agencies are reluctant to commit financial support.

In addition, without a Blue Cross contract, the hospital would not be fully reimbursed for costs incurred by patients with that type of health insurance.

A SPOKESMAN for Blue Cross recently said more than 30 per cent of the persons in the United States are insured by the company. He said it has been the firm's policy since 1973 to require review of all hospital facilities by a local planning agency before entering into a contract.

Hospital officials plan to meet with Blue Cross officials this month about a contract. Although hospital officials admit not having a Blue Cross contract would create a financial hardship, they say a hospital is needed and they plan to proceed regardless of the outcome of the talks.

Hamptons vacation in Europe

Archie and Bobby Hampton, 305 N. Elmhurst Rd., recently returned from a three-week trip to Europe, including a stop at Lisbon, Portugal, to visit their son and his family.

The Hamptons toured London, Paris and Madrid, in addition to Lisbon. They were impressed with the friendliness wherever they went. They say they were able to get assistance whenever needed and had no problem with language. They claim there was always someone who could speak English or could understand their gestures.

The Mount Prospectors made a list of things to see and do and managed to cover most of them.

"We especially enjoyed seeing places and things that were hundreds and hundreds of years old," Bobby said. "Some items dated back to the second century."

THE HAMPTONS said they enjoyed the food everywhere, eating what the people in each country ate. They wanted to try the specialty wherever they went.

"In Portugal," Bobby said, "we even ate squid."

The couple found their son, Dr. Michael H. Hampton, and his family well adjusted to living in Portugal since January of this year.

Mike and his wife Judy are graduates of Arlington High School — he in 1960, Judy (nee Petry) in 1961. Mike received his doctorate in bacteriology from the University of Wisconsin.

"Mike doesn't know how long he'll be employed in Portugal," Mrs. Hampton said. "The new government there now seems to be more interested in the arts than in science. And Mike is doing scientific research."

OTHER RECENT travelers are Diane and John Dybdahl, 303 Prospect Manor, who took a two-week trip to England and Norway.

The Dybdahls spent three days in London, a "huge and interesting city," Diane said they saw plays, attended a concert, rode the subway system, saw the changing of the guard and were amazed by the size of the enormous Heathrow Airport.

"Best of all were the people in London," Diane said. "They were so very nice."

The rest of the Dybdahl vacation was spent in Norway. They toured Oslo and Trondheim and then went by boat up the western Norwegian coastline. They journeyed from Bergen to Troms, far above the Arctic Circle.

"It wasn't particularly cold up there," Diane said, "just gorgeous. That is definitely the most beautiful part of Norway."

"The towns far up the coast are so nice," she continued. "Most of them have been rebuilt since the war."

Decision expected by Saturday

Club backers of woman face ouster

A high-ranking Kiwanis official has predicted that some members of Elk Grove Kiwanis may be dropped if they continue to support the group's only female member, Mary Clark.

The continuing controversy could be decided Saturday at the next meeting of the club, which has been threatened with loss of its charter by Kiwanis International.

The Kiwanis official, Maurice Myerson, lieutenant governor for the area district, believed the Elk Grove club would not lose its charter. He said he considered it more likely, instead, that members who choose to continue to back Miss Clark will be dropped from the Kiwanis membership rolls.

A majority of members of the local club voted to defy the order to oust Miss Clark, but Myerson said the vote did not reflect the sentiments of the entire club.

"There are too many members who have indicated they want to remain Kiwanians," Myerson told The Herald. "The club will probably lose some members who just don't want to abide by the Kiwanis constitution, which bars women from joining."

MISS CLARK was asked to join the club last February when her name was included in a bulk mailing. Her application and membership were processed through the international organization and approved without problems.

When the international became aware of its error, the local club was ordered to remove Miss Clark.

Myerson said he objects to the bad image he said the international has gotten because of the publicity surrounding the order.

"Every man who wears the 'K' is a member of Kiwanis International. It's not some mystical group pulling strings," he said. "These people in Elk Grove broke a law. There's already enough lawlessness in this country and it's about time people were made to uphold the law. They broke their own by-laws."

RICHARD HARRELL, president of the Elk Grove chapter, said the club will continue to discuss its options in view of an order by the international to drop Miss Clark from its roster or lose its charter.

Harrell declined to comment on the options that are open to the local chapter.

"Until the club takes action, everyone can speculate on all of this, but I just don't want to say what will happen," he said. "Hopefully it will be evident after the meeting what direction the club will be taking."

The Elk Grove club was directed Oct. 7 to drop Miss Clark, 26, head librarian at the Elk Grove Public Library, in two weeks. The deadline was later extended by the international to give the local chapter time to reverse its decision to support Miss Clark.

Apparent heart attack

Principal Haskell dies

Robert Haskell, 50, principal of Elk Grove High School, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack while hunting near Barrington.

Haskell, principal of the high school since 1967, had been hunting with two of his four sons when he suffered the fatal heart attack about 9 a.m. Sunday.

A memorial service will be held at the high school, Arlington Heights Road and Elk Grove Boulevard, at 10 a.m. Wednesday. High school classes will be suspended that day, said Roderick C. McLennan, assistant superintendent for instruction of High School District 214.

"BOB HASKELL has been in the school system for many years. He was elevated to principal because of his proven abilities," McLennan said. "He was well liked by the students and the staff. He will be missed as a very fine human being and as an excellent administrator."

Before being assigned as principal at Elk Grove High School, Haskell was an assistant principal for instructional services at Forest View High School for three years and was acting assistant principal at Prospect High School for a year. Haskell also served as a social sci-

In addition, he was treasurer of the Elk Grove Kiwanis Club, a member of the Elk Grove Community Services Board and president of the Mid-Suburban Board of Controls. He served three years in the U.S. Army during World War II, earning a bronze star award.

HASKELL, 200 BAMBURY Ave., Elk Grove Village, is survived by his widow, Evelyn M. Haskell, nee Varner; four sons, Robert E. of Roselle, Edward A. of Elk Grove Village, James M. of Arlington Heights and Ronald T. of Elk Grove Village; sister, Anita Oestmann of Chicago Heights; and mother, Bessie Haskell of Chicago Heights. He was a former Mount Prospect resident.

Boy, 19, held in burglary

A 19-year-old River Grove youth was captured Saturday night after police interrupted a burglary at Olson's Garden Center, 621 N. Main St., Mount Prospect.

Arrested was Craig A. Crider III, who was being held by police pending a bond hearing today. Police said they went to the garden center shortly after 11 p.m. after a report of someone seen entering the store through a window.

A suspect, later identified as Crider, was seen inside the garden center but fled through the opposite side of the building when police ordered him to stop. Crider was picked up shortly after as he was hitchhiking on Northwest Highway near School Street, police said.

Police said $20 had been taken from a cash register but was found dropped in the store. There was an estimated $250 damage to the cash register.

Police Sunday also reported burglaries at 617 Oriole Ln. and 1501 Dempster St. An estimated $250 worth of tools was

Helton to take stand today

by JOE SWICKARD

Accused killer Ronald Helton will take the witness stand today and give what is expected to be his fourth version of his role in the murder of an Arlington Heights gas station manager five years ago.

Helton, 22, is charged with the slaying of Fred J. Tallon, the 64-year-old night manager of the Arlington Park Shell service station, Wilke Road and Euclid Avenue, in the predawn hours of Nov. 11, 1969.

The bench trial, entering its fourth day before Circuit Court Judge Jacques F. Hellingoetter at the Civic Center, already has heard, through written statements and video tapes, Helton giving three conflicting stories of his role in the fatal stabbing of Tallon.

Two policemen called as defense witnesses, testified Friday that Helton was allowed to leave jail the day after his arrest for a holiday meal with his family and that they each took him to their homes after he was charged with murder. They also said Helton was given money by the Arlington Heights police chief while he was expected to be a prosecution witness.

A VIDEO TAPE of Helton's third version of the crime was played Friday in court. In it the then 17-year-old defendant named James Ales as the killer who pursued Tallon across Wilke Road. Helton told how Ales pushed the victim through the gas station window after first stabbing him to prevent a phone call for help. Ales then repeatedly stabbed Tallon in his futile struggles and flight to escape, Helton said.

The tape, taken on Dec. 31, 1969 at the Arlington Heights police station, is in direct conflict with tapes made Dec. 25 and Dec. 27 while Helton was being held in the Du Page County Jail on other charges.

In the first written statement and taped account, Helton said Raymond Katzensky was the killer and that Katzensky had related the story to him as "pointers" on how to commit a robbery and a sure method of stabbing someone to death.

The next day Helton changed his story, saying he accompanied Katzensky on the crime but was unaware that his alleged partner was armed. He further said he was prevented from intervening by another member of the robbery team, Robert Fucini, who held him at bay with a pistol.

IN THE THIRD version, Katzensky was dropped entirely and replaced with a James Leweckie, who Helton said waited in the car.

In this version, Ales rifled the victim's pockets of money and took his wedding band before returning to the station to clean out the cash register, Helton said. Again, Helton said, Fucini covered him with a pistol and the killer pointed the weapon at him and called him "nothing but a chicken."

Helton recounted how the alleged killer wiped the knife with a rag and then passed around Tallon's wedding band. Everyone in the car tried on the ring, Helton said.

"They passed it around. And mine was the only one it would go down on," Helton said on the tape demonstrating slipping the ring over his knuckle.

He said he did not get a share of the $87 reported stolen because "I turned chicken on them."

On the tape he was asked why he again was changing his story, Helton answered that he had been threatened by Ales. He said Ales, also being held at the Du Page County Jail, passed the word through other prisoners that he would be killed if he talked.

ASKED WHY he had named Katzensky in earlier versions, Helton said it was Ales' plan. "Jim was using him as a

LWV sponsors parks program

A program entitled "Park Districts — See How They Run," sponsored by the Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect League of Women Voters, will be presented today at the Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton Ave.

The presentation is the first in a series of meetings to inform league members and the community of the financial status of the Arlington Heights Park District, which is strapped for funds.

The session begins at 7:30 p.m. in the library's Dunton Room. After a panel discussion and a slide presentation, questions will be taken from the audience.

Panel members include Kay Muller, Arlington Heights Park District commissioner; Theodore M. Kavadas, director of parks and recreation for Highland Park; Ernest W. Nance, director of parks and recreation for Park Ridge; Mary Cascino, Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission specialist in urban planning; and Timothy J. Riordan, attorney representing the Arlington Heights Park District.

Program moderator will be Mary C. Schlott.

Sewer connection changes hike Dwyer Avenue cost

Changes in sewer connections to five houses have added $5,211.22 to the cost of the Dwyer Avenue special assessment paving project. The extra cost will be paid by the village.

Cooper Roberts of Consoer, Townsend and Associates, engineers during installation of the new road, engineers discovered the five connections were all on the same level and would thus cause pipes to run into each other. The correction has been made, he said.

Village Engineer Allen Sander said the added expense could be charged to the village's water and sewer fund or could be charged to the village portion of the special assessment on the project.

Paving on Dwyer is complete with restoration scheduled to be finished this week, Roberts said. Although the street is now higher on the east side by 8 1/4 inches between Miner and St.

James streets, Roberts denied that the engineering firm had made a mistake in planning the street.

"THE ONLY unfortunate thing is that when the excavation was done, it had been noticed (that the east side sloped steeply) the work (to correct it) would have been done then. The only added cost is the curb and gutter and the stone fill," he said, the cost of which is being picked up by the firm.

Work on the Dwyer project was halted Oct. 21 when neighborhood complaints reached village officials about the steepness of east-side driveways. Board of Local Improvements commissioners agreed that the best way to fix the driveways was to tear out the east-side curb and gutter, fill in the east side of the street, and end up with a sloped street.

"The slope on Dwyer does not be-

Sewer, water, sidewalk hearing set

A hearing on a sanitary sewer, water and sidewalk project for relocated N. Arlington Heights Road will be held Nov. 21 by the Board of Local Improvements.

The estimated $298,537 project will involve 30 to 40 homeowners who live on Arlington Heights Road between Dundee Road and University Drive, said David Patterson, president of BOLI.

Sewer and water main installation in the area has been discussed by BOLI for more than a year. Patterson said many of the homes are on wells and septic systems, which he termed "totally unacceptable" to village standards. Further development in that area, known as the Dundee triangle, would be impossible until proper water and sewer systems are installed, he said.

Storm sewers were installed by the state when it relocated and repaved the road. Sidewalks are needed for students walking to Buffalo Grove High School, Patterson said. He said High School Dist. 214 buses nearby students several blocks to the school because there is no safe way for them to walk.

said, Patterson said the street's slope is not noticeable and added that it is a "beautiful street."

Arlington asks 120 racing days

by KURT BAER

Arlington Park Race Track Pres. John F. Loomis has asked the Illinois Racing Board for 120 days of racing at Arlington Park next year, from June 2 to Oct. 18.

Arlington Park regularly asks for 120 racing days each year when the racing board considers date allocations. However the application is not in any way binding on the board which can assign any dates it wants to the various state racing associations.

The racing board will hold hearings on the 1975 schedule Nov. 20-22 in Chicago. The date it will consider Arlington Park's application has not yet been set.

This year, Arlington Park had 84 days of racing from June 3 to Sept. 7. The meeting was one of the most lucrative in Illinois history, a fact Loomis is likely to point to when he appears before the board.

Wagering this summer at Arlington Park increased 21 per cent over the track's 1973 season, and attendance was up 18 per cent. A total of 1,215,333 persons wagered $137,543,902.

ARLINGTON PARK'S application includes 60 days for Arlington Park and 60 days for Washington Park Race Track, with all the racing to be held at Arlington Park. Loomis is president of both race tracks. Both are owned by Madison Square Garden Corp.

In his presentation to the racing board a year ago, Loomis warned that another bad year of racing at Arlington Park this summer could lead the race track's owners to question whether the track should remain open.

Illinois horse racing, he said last year, was "at the crossroads."

After the public hearings later this month, the racing board is required by law to announce the 1975 schedule no later than Jan. 1. Summer dates, including those requested by Arlington Park, are the most profitable and keenly contested racing days.

Weekend burglaries probed

Arlington Heights police are investigating two weekend burglaries — one in which an estimated $1,650 in cash was taken from the Arlington Park Shell station, 600 N. Wilke Rd.

Burglars opened a safe in the station office with tools from the garage, police were told Sunday. The money was taken from the safe.

Helton to testify in court today sucker . . . use him as a sucker all the way through."

Katzenberg and Fucini were arrested in Georgia while Helton and Ales traveled to Florida and back, a trip financed by Helton. Ales and Helton were arrested in Du Page County on other charges when they returned in late December, 1969.

After playing the third tape, Asst. State's Atty. Lee Hettinger rested the prosecution and defense Attorney Melvin Kamm moved for a directed acquittal of Helton. Heltinger denied the motion.

LT. GEORGE EKBLAD, who already had appeared for the prosecution, then testified that neither he nor other members of the police prompted, coached or induced Helton in his statements of December 1969. He said he "never" offered the defendant rewards in exchange for his cooperation.

Ekblad denied the defense contention that Helton was kept in an unlocked cell and was paid to perform chores around the station.

However, the 15-year police veteran testified that Helton was given "cigar money" by Police Chief L. W. Calderwood, and that he (Ekblad) took Helton to his home on at least one occasion. Helton also was allowed to go with his family on a holiday meal, the day after he was charged with murder, but that he was escorted by two detectives at the time, Ekblad said.

Helton remained in Arlington Heights rather than being transferred to the County Jail, because Ekblad said he "understood" the State's Attorney's office had gotten a stay of transfer order because Helton, at that time, was going to be a witness for the prosecution.

UNDER CROSS-examination, Ekblad said that both Helton and his parents were glad that he was not taken to the County Jail.

Det. Gene Deck, the second defense witness, also testified Helton was not given favors nor worked for a salary around the police station. However, Deck said he also took Helton to his home "once that I can recall."

Deck said Helton remained in the Arlington Heights lockup because there "was no room for him in the county (jail) witness area."

Helton will be called upon today as the last witness to give his version of his treatment and status while in jail and his part, if any, in the five-year-old crime.

Blood pressure tests offered at no charge

You can have your blood pressure taken for free at one of three Arlington Heights locations from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

This special service, sponsored by the Arlington Heights Nurses' Club and the North Cook County Heart Assn., will be given at Harris Pharmacy in Dunton Court, Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 800 N. Dunton Ave.; and Turnstyle Store, Rand and Arlington Heights Roads.

Entry was gained sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday by breaking a window, 10 feet off the ground, authorities said.

In the other break-in, thieves made off with about 85 bottles of beer and liquor, a .22 caliber rifle and about $987 in cash from the Arlington Park Theatre, 3400 W. Euclid Ave., it was reported Saturday.

The money was taken from cash drawers in the box office and manager's office, and entry was gained by prying open the box office door and taking out a ceiling panel over the other office door. Entry to the building was made through a door.

The burglary occurred sometime between 11:30 p.m. Friday and 8:15 a.m. Saturday, police were told.

The interviews will conclude Wednesday night with Arlene B. Cayer at 7 p.m.

15-acre annex expected tonight

The Arlington Heights Village Board is expected to annex 15 acres, including the proposed site of Wheeling Township's new town hall, at its regular meeting tonight.

The properties lie about a quarter-mile south of the intersection of Palatine and Arlington Heights roads.

Children find pins in Halloween candy

Two Arlington Heights youngsters found straight pins in their Halloween treats, police were told Friday and Saturday. No injuries were reported.

Joan DelGiorno, 1342 W. Park, told police Friday her son, Michael, 10, bit into a candy bar and found a pin inside.

Valerie Johnson, 10, of 932 N. Salem, reported Saturday that she discovered a pin in a candy collected in Thursday night's trick-or-treating.

Police are investigating the incidents, and it is unknown if they are related.

Students learning 'bachelor survival'

by BOB GALLAS

"This stuff looks awful. We must have done something wrong."
"You sure you got everything in this?"
"Whose egg is on the floor?"

The home economics rooms at several schools in High School Dist. 214 have been taken over by a group interested in survival — bachelor survival.

A course, designed to prepare males for life on their own after high school, is becoming more and more popular in the district, especially at Forest View High School, Arlington Heights.

WHAT STARTED out mainly as a cooking class for boys has evolved into a complete training program, said Joy Moody, who teaches "bachelor survival" classes at Forest View.

The course now covers housing, furniture, laundry and grooming in addition to the perennial favorite, cooking. Mrs. Moody's three classes of 24 boys each are full.

"We offer what the guys will be able to use later, whether they go away to college or get an apartment and start working," said Mrs. Moody.

"Some guys still insist they'll find a girlfriend to cook, wash or iron. I tell them the girl will be happy to do it — for 20 cents a shirt," Mrs. Moody said with a laugh.

In the three years the one semester course has been offered at Forest View, it's grown to include virtually all the skills a male living at home might not be familiar with.

TO FAMILIARIZE students with housing, rental agents from apartment complexes are brought in to speak. Also discussed is how to pick roommates, Mrs. Moody said.

Furniture also is discussed. Students work with basic apartment blueprints and plan furniture layouts with pieces of paper. "They enjoy that. I think it brings out the child in them," Mrs. Moody said.

Next comes laundry, how to wash clothes and then iron them. "Most had the idea you had to read a big book to understand how to work a washer and dryer," she said.

A grooming section emphasizes buying clothes. "Some say they'll never wear a tie or a suit," Mrs. Moody said. "But I remind them they might want to wear one to their wedding."

Of course cooking is the most popular with the men, probably because they get to eat what they cook, she said.

The students divide up into "kitchens" or smaller groups that work together on baking projects. The projects range from making special desserts to main dishes.

WHILE SOME take the class only for the cooking — and eating, many also take it with an eye on the future.

"I plan to work the night shift when I graduate," said senior Dave Tolle. "So I'll have to cook my own meals. I want to know what I'm doing."

While Mrs. Moody is on hand to answer questions, the students are usually on their own when it comes to cooking. "I try not to give too much of an opinion. I let them think. I'm not going to put them down."
